SCENE.—Argos.

TIME.—The heroic age.

DATE.—458 B.C., at the City Dionysia.

ARGUMENT

WHEN that Helen had fled with Paris to Troyland, her husband Menelaüs and his brother Agamemnon, the sons of Atreus and two-throned Kings of Argos, sought to take vengeance on him who had done outrage to Zeus, the guardian of the rights of hospitality. Before their palace appeared a portent, which the seer Calchas interpreted to them : the two eagles were the Kings themselves and the pregnant hare seized in their talons was the city which held Priam's son and Helen and her wealth. But Artemis, she that loves the wild things of the field, was wroth with the Kings : and when all their host was gathered at Aulis and would sail with its thousand ships, she made adverse winds to blow ; so that the ships rotted and the crews lost heart. Then the seer, albeit in darkling words, spake unto Agamemnon : " If thou wilt appease the goddess and so free the fleet, thou must sacrifice with thine own hand thy daughter Iphigenia." And he did even so, and the Greeks sailed away in their ships. Nine years did they lay siege to Troytown, but they could not take it ; for it was fated that it should not be taken until the tenth year.

Now when King Agamemnon fared forth from Argos, he left at home his Queen, Clytaemestra, Leda's child and Helen's sister (though she had for father Tyndareus, but Helen's was Zeus himself) ; and in her loneliness and because Agamemnon had slain her daughter, she gave ear to the whisperings of another's love, even of Aegisthus, son of that Thyestes who had lain with the wife of his brother Atreus ; and for revenge Atreus slew other of Thyestes' sons and gave their father thereof to eat ; and when Thyestes learned whereof he had eaten, he cursed his brother's race.

With the coming of the tenth year of the war, Queen Clytaemestra, plotting with Aegisthus against her husband's life, ordered that watch be kept upon the roof of her palace at Argos ; for a succession of beacon-fires was to flash the news from Troy when the city should be captured by Agamemnon. For weary months the watchman has been on the look-out—but at last the signal blazes forth in the night. In celebration of the glad event, the Queen has altar-fires kindled throughout the city. The Chorus of Elders will not credit the tidings ; nor are their doubts resolved until a herald announces the approach of Agamemnon, whose ship had alone escaped the storm that had raged in the night just passed. Welcomed by his Queen, Agamemnon bespeaks a kindly reception for his captive, Cassandra, Priam's daughter, and on his wife's urgency consents to walk to his palace on costly tapestries. Cassandra seeks in vain to convince the Elders of their master's peril ; and, conscious also of her own doom, passes within. Agamemnon's death-shriek is heard ; the two corpses are displayed. Clytaemestra exults in her deed and defies the Elders. Aegisthus enters to declare that Agamemnon has been slain in requital for his father's crime. The Elders, on the point of coming to blows with Aegisthus and his body-guard, are restrained by Clytaemestra, but not before they utter the warning that Orestes will return to exact vengeance for the murder of his father.

[Upon the roof of the palace of Agamemnon at Argos]

Release from this weary task of mine has been my cry unto the gods throughout my long year's watch, wherein, couchant upon the palace roof of the Atreidae, upon my bended arm, like a hound, I have learned to know aright the conclave of the stars of night, yea those radiant potentates conspicuous in the firmament, bringers of winter and summer unto mankind [the constellations, what time they wane and rise].

So now I am still awatch for the signal-flame, the gleaming fire that is to harbinger news from Troy and tidings of its capture. For thus rules my Queen, woman in sanguine heart and man in strength of purpose. And whenever I make here my bed, restless and dank with dew and unvisited by dreams—for instead of sleep fear stands ever by my side, so that I cannot close my eyelids fast in sleep—and whenever I am minded to sing or hum a stave (and thus apply an antidote of song to ward off drowsiness), then it is my tears start forth, as I bewail the fortunes of this our house, not ordered for the best as in days ago. But to-night may there come happy release from my weary task! May the fire with its glad tidings flash through the gloom!

[The signal-fire suddenly flashes out

All hail, thou blaze that showest forth in the night a light as it were of day, thou harbinger of many a choral dance in Argos in thanksgiving for this glad event!

What ho! What ho!

To Agamemnon's Queen I thus cry aloud the signal to rise from her couch and in all haste to uplift in her palace halls a shout of jubilation in welcome of yon fire, if in very truth the city of Ilium is taken, as this beacon doth unmistakably announce. And I will make an overture with a dance upon my own account; for my lord's lucky cast I shall count to mine own score, yon beacon having thrown me treble sixes.

Ah well, may the master of the house come home and may I clasp his welcome hand in mine! For the rest I'm dumb; a great ox stands upon my tongue¹—yet the house itself, could it but speak, might tell a tale full plain; since, for my part, of mine own choice I have words for such as know, and to those who know not I've lost my memory.

[He descends by an inner stairway; attendants kindle fires at the altars placed in front of the palace. Enter the chorus of Argive Elders joined in honour of throne and sceptre by grace of Zeus, put forth from this land with an armament of a thousand ships by Argives manned, a warrior force to champion their cause.

Loud rang the battle-cry they uttered in their rage, even as eagles scream, that, in lonely grief for their brood, driven by the oarage of their pinions, wheel high over their eyries, for that they have lost their toil of guarding their nurslings' nest.

But some one of the powers supreme—Apollo perchance, or Pan, or Zeus—heareth the shrill wailing scream of the clamorous birds, these sojourners in his realm, and against the transgressors sendeth vengeance at last though late. Even so Zeus, whose power is over all, Zeus lord of host and guest, sendeth against Alexander the sons of Atreus, that for the sake of a woman of many a lord¹ he may inflict struggles full many and wearisome (when the knee is pressed in the dust and the spear is shivered in the onset) on Danaans and on Trojans alike.

The case now standeth where it doth—it moveth to fulfilment at its destined end. Not by offerings burned in secret, not by secret libations, not by tears, shall man soften the stubborn wrath of sacrifices unsanctified.²

But we, incapable of service by reason of our aged

frame, discarded from that martial mustering of long ago, bide here at home, supporting on our staves a strength like unto a child's. For as the vigour of youth, leaping up within the breast, is like unto that of age, since the war-god is not in his place; so over-age, its leafage already withering, goeth its way on triple feet, and, no better than a child, wandereth, a dream that is dreamed by day.

But, O daughter of Tyndareôs, Queen Clytemnestra, what hath befallen? What tidings hast thou? On what intelligence and convinced by what report is it that thou sendest about thy messengers to enjoin sacrifice? For all the gods our city worships, the gods supreme, the gods below, the gods of the heavens and of the mart, have their altars ablaze with offerings. Now here, now there, the flames rise high as heaven, yielding to the soft and guileless persuasion of hallowed unguent, even the sacrificial oil brought from the inner chambers of the palace. sacrifice, wards off the cankering care of the sorrow that eateth my heart.

Power is mine to proclaim the augury of triumph given on their way to princely men—since still my age,¹ inspired of the gods, breatheth upon me Persuasion, the strength of song—how that the twin-throned command of the Achaeans, the concordant captains of the youth of Hellas, was sped with avenging spear and arm against the Teucrian land by the inspiriting omen appearing to the kings of the ships—the kingly birds, one black, one white of tail, hard by the palace, on the spear-hand,² in a station full conspicuous, devouring a hare with brood unborn checked in the last effort to escape.³

Sing the song of woe, the song of woe, but may the good prevail!

Then the goodly seer of the host, marking how that the two warlike sons of Atreus were twain in temper, knew the devourers of the hare for the leaders of the armament, and thus interpreted the portent

For, of her pity, holy Artemis is wroth at the winged hounds of her sire that they make sacrifice of a wretched timorous thing, herself and her young ere she hath brought them forth. An abomination unto her is the eagles' feast."

And I implore Paeon,¹ the healer, that she may not raise adverse gales with long delay to stay the Danaan fleet from putting forth by reason of her urgency of another sacrifice, knowing no law, unmeet for feast, worker of family strife, dissolving wife's reverence for husband. For there abideth wrath—terrible, not to be suppressed, a treacherous warder of the home, ever mindful, a wrath that exacteth vengeance for a child."

Sing the song of woe, the song of woe, but may the good prevail !

Zeus, whosoe'er he be,—if by this name it well pleaseth him to be invoked, by this name I call to him—as I weigh all things in the balance, I can conjecture none save “Zeus,” if in very sooth I needs must cast aside this vain burthen from my heart. He¹ who aforetime was mighty, swelling with insolence for every fray, he shall not even be named as having ever been ; and he² who arose thereafter, he hath met his overthrower and is past and gone. But whosoe'er, heartily taking thought beforehand, giveth title of victory in triumphant shout to “Zeus,” he shall gain wisdom altogether,—Zeus, who leadeth mortals the way of understanding, Zeus, who hath stablished as a fixed ordinance that “wisdom cometh by suffering.” But even as trouble, bringing memory of pain, droppeth o'er the mind in sleep, so to those who would not cometh wisdom. With constraint, methinks, cometh the grace of the powers divine enthroned upon their awful seats.

the adverse blasts of fortune, what time the Achæan folk, on the shore over against Chalcis in the region where Aulis' tides surge to and fro, were sore distressed by opposing winds and failing stores ; and the breezes that blew from the Strymon, bringing them grievous leisure, hunger, and tribulation of spirit in a cruel port, driving the men distraught, and sparing nor ship nor cable, by doubling the season of their stay, began to wither by wasting the flower of Argos ; and when the seer, urging Artemis as cause, proclaimed to the chieftains another remedy, more grievous even than the bitter storm, so that the sons of Atreus smote the ground with their staves and stifled not their tears—

Then the elder king spake and said : “ Hard is my fate to refuse obedience, and hard, if I must slay my child, the glory of my home, and at the altar-side stain with streams of a virgin's blood a father's hand. Which of these courses is not fraught with ill ? How can I become a deserter to my fleet and fail my allies in arms ? For that they should with passionate eagerness crave a sacrifice to lull the winds—even a virgin's blood—stands within their right. May all be for the best.”

that hour his purpose shifted to resolve that deed of uttermost audacity. For mankind is emboldened by wretched delusion, counsellor of ill, primal source of woe. So then he hardened his heart to sacrifice his daughter that he might prosper a war waged to avenge a woman, and as an offering for the voyaging of a fleet!

Her supplications, her cries of "Father," and her virgin life, the commanders in their eagerness for war reckoned as naught. Her father, after a prayer, bade his ministers lay hold of her as, enwrapped in her robes, she lay fallen forward, and with stout heart to raise her, as it were a kid, high above the altar; and with a guard upon her lovely mouth, the bit's strong and stifling might, to stay a cry that had been a curse on his house.

Then, as she shed to earth her saffron robe, she smote each of her sacrificers with a glance from her eyes beseeching pity, and showing as in a picture, fain to speak; for oft had she sung where men were met at her father's hospitable board, and with her virgin voice had been wont lovingly to do honour to her loved father's prayer for blessing at the third libation¹—

What next befell, I beheld not, neither do I tell. The art of Calchas failed not of fulfilment. Justice inclineth her scales so that wisdom cometh at the price of suffering. But what is yet to be, that thou shalt know when it befalleth ; till then, let it be—'tis all one with sorrowing too soon. Clear it will come, together with the light of dawn. I am come, Clytaemestra, in obedience to thy royal authority ; for it is meet to do homage to the consort of a sovereign prince when her lord's throne is tenantless. Now whether the tidings thou hast heard be good or ill, and thou dost make sacrifice with hopes that herald gladness, I fain would hear ; yet, if thou wouldst keep silence, I make no complaint.

Hephaestus, from Ida speeding forth his brilliant blaze. Beacon passed beacon on to us by courier-flame : Ida, to the Hermaean scaur in Lemnos ; to the mighty blaze upon the island succeeded, third, the summit of Athos sacred unto Zeus ; and, soaring high aloft so as to arch the main, the flame, travelling joyously onward in its strength . . . the pine-wood torch, its golden-beamed light, as another sun,¹ passing the message on to the watch-towers of Macistus. He, delaying not nor heedlessly overcome by sleep, neglected not his part as messenger. Far over Euripus' stream came the beacon-light and gave the signal to the sentinels on Messapion. They, kindling a heap of withered heather, lit up their answering blaze and sped the message on. The flame, now gathering strength and in no wise dimmed, like unto a radiant moon o'erleaped the plain of Asopus to Cithaeron's scaur, and roused another relay of missive fire. Nor did the warders there disdain the far-flung light, but made a blaze higher than had been bidden them. Across Gorgopus' water shot the light, reached the mount of Aegiplanctus, and urged the ordinance of fire to make no dallying. Kindling high with unstinted force a mighty beard of flame, they sped it forward that, as it blazed, it o'erpassed even the headland that looks upon the Saronic gulf ; until Troy is this day in the hands of the Achaeans. Within the town there sounds loud, methinks, a clamour of voices that will not blend. Pour vinegar and oil into the same cruse and thou wilt say that, as foes, they keep asunder; so the cries of vanquished and victors greet the ear, distinct as their fortunes are diverse. Those, flung upon the corpses of their husbands and their brothers, children upon the bodies of their aged sires who gave them life, bewail from lips no longer free the death of their dearest ones, while these—a night of restless toil after battle sets them down famished to break their fast on such fare as the town affords; not billeted in order due, but as each man hath drawn his lot of chance. And even now they are quartered in the captured Trojan homes, delivered from the frosts and dew of the naked sky, and like happy men will sleep all the night un sentinelled.

Now if they keep them clear of guilt towards the gods of the town—those of the conquered land—and towards their shrines, the captors shall not be made captives in their turn. Only may no mad impulse first assail the soldiery, overmastered by greed, to ravish what they should not! For to win safe passage home they needs must travel back the other length of their double course. But even if, void of such offence towards the gods, our host should reach home, the grievous suffering of the dead might still prove wakeful—so be it fresh mischance do not befall. o'erleap the huge enthralling net, all-conquering doom. Great Zeus it is, lord of host and guest, whom I revere—he who hath wrought this, and hath long been bending his bow against Alexander so that his bolt should neither fall short of the mark nor, flying beyond the stars, be launched in vain.

“The stroke of Zeus” they may call it; 'tis his hand that can be traced therein. As he determines, so he acts. It hath been said by some one that the gods deign not to be mindful of mortals who trample underfoot the grace of inviolable sanctities. But that man knew not the fear of God!

Now standeth revealed how ruin is the penalty for reckless crime when men breathe a spirit of pride above just measure for that their mansions teem with abundance o'erpassing their best good. But let there be such portion of wealth as bringeth no distress, so that he who hath a goodly share of sound sense may have a sufficiency therewith. For riches are no bulwark to the man who in wantonness hath spurned from his sight the mighty altar of Righteousness.

No, he is driven on by perverse Temptation, the overmastering child of designing Destruction; and remedy is utterly in vain. His evil is not hidden; it shineth forth, a baleful gleam. Like base metal

To his prayers all gods are deaf, and the man who is conversant with such deeds, him they destroy in his unrighteousness.

Such was even Paris, who came to the house of the sons of Atreus and did dishonour to his hosts' hospitable board by stealing away a wedded wife.

But she, bequeathing to her people the clang of shield and spear and armament of fleets, and bringing to Ilium destruction in place of dower, with light step she passed through the gates—daring a deed undareable. Then loud wailed the seers of the house crying, "Alas, alas, for the home, the home, and for the princes thereof! Alas for the husband's bed and the impress of her form so dear! Lo, he sits apart in the anguish of his grief, silent, smitten in his honour but upbraiding not. In his yearning for her who sped beyond the sea, a phantom will seem to be lord of the house. The grace of fair-formed statues is hateful to him; and in the hunger of his eyes all loveliness is departed.

In dreams there come to him mournful semblances

Such are the sorrows at hearth and home, aye and sorrows surpassing these ; and at large, in every house of all who sped forth in company from the land of Hellas, is seen grief that passeth bearing. Yea, many are the things that pierce the heart ; for whom each sent forth, them he knows ; but to the home of each come urns and ashes, not living men.

For Ares bartereth the bodies of men for gold ; he holdeth his balance in the contest of the spear ; and back from Ilium to their loved ones he sendeth a heavy dust passed through his burning, a dust bewept with plenteous tears, in place of men freighting urns well bestowed with ashes.¹ So they make lament, lauding now this one : " How skilled in battle ! city's walls, those in their beauty's bloom are entombed in Ilian land—the foeman's soil hath covered its conquerors.

Dangerous is a people's voice charged with wrath—it hath the office of a curse of public doom. In anxious fear I bide to hear some tidings shrouded still in gloom; for Heaven is not unmindful of men of blood. In the end the black Spirits of Vengeance bring to obscurity him who hath prospered in unrighteousness and wear down his fortunes by reverse; and once he hath passed among them that are brought to naught, there is no more help for him. Glory in excess is fraught with peril; 'tis the lofty peak that is smitten by heaven's thunderbolt. Prosperity unassailed by envy is my choice. Let me not be a destroyer of cities; no, nor let me be despoiled and live to see my own life in another's power!

(ONE ELDER)

Heralded by a beacon of good tidings a swift report has spread throughout the town. Yet whether it be true, or some deception of the gods, who knows?

(A SECOND ELDER)

Who is so childish or so bereft of sense, once he has let his heart be fired by sudden tidings of a beacon fire, to despond if the story change?

(A THIRD ELDER)

'Tis like a woman's eager nature to yield assent to pleasing news ere yet the truth be clear.

Over credulous, a woman's mind has boundaries open to quick encroachment ; but quick to perish is rumour by a woman voiced.

(LEADER OF THE CHORUS)

We shall know anon about this passing on of flaming lights and beacon signals and fires, whether they perchance be true or whether, dream-like, this light's glad coming hath beguiled our senses. Lo ! Yonder, approaching from the shore, I see a herald with boughs of olive overshaded. The thirsty dust, consorting sister of the mire,¹ assures me that neither by dumb show nor by kindling a flame of mountain wood will he give sign with smoke of fire, but in plain words will bid us either to rejoice the more, or else—but God avert the omen of the contrary ! To the good that hath appeared may there be addition of good !

(ANOTHER ELDER)

If there be one who maketh this prayer with other intent toward the State, let him reap himself the fruit of his misguided purpose !

And the gods gathered here, I greet them all; him, too, mine own patron, Hermes, beloved herald, of heralds all revered; and the heroes¹ who sped us forth—I pray that they may receive back in kindness the remnant of the host that hath escaped the spear. Hail, halls of our Kings, beloved roofs, and ye august seats, and ye divinities that face the sun,² if ever in days gone by, give fitting welcome now with gladness in these your eyes unto your King after long lapse of years. For bearing light in darkness to you and to all assembled here alike, he hath returned—Agamemnon, our King. Oh give him goodly greeting, as is meet and right, since he hath uprooted Troy with the mattock of Zeus, the Avenger, wherewith her soil has been upturn. Demolished are the altars and the shrines of her gods; and the seed of her whole land hath been wasted utterly. Upon the neck of Troy hath he cast a yoke so grievous, and now he hath come home, our King, Atreus' elder son, a man of happy fate, worthy of honour beyond all living men. And if one were to tell of the wintry cold, past all enduring, when Ida's snow slew the birds; or of the heat, what time upon his waveless noon-day couch, windless the sea sank to sleep—but what need to bewail all this? Our labour's past; past for the dead so that they will never care even to wake to life again. What need for the living to count the number of the slain, what need to repine at fortune's frowns? I hold it fitting that our misfortunes bid us a long farewell. For us, the remnant of the Argive host, the gain hath the advantage and the loss does not bear down the scale; so that, as we speed athwart land and sea, it is meet that we make this boast unto yon light of heaven: "The Argive armament, having taken Troy at last, unto the gods throughout Hellas hath nailed up these spoils to be a glory in their shrines from days of old." Whoso hears the story of these deeds must needs extol the city and the leaders of her host; and the grace of Zeus that brought them to accomplishment shall receive its due meed of gratitude. My tale is told.

Thy words have proved me wrong. I deny it not;—for the aged have ever youth to learn aright. But these tidings should most have interest for the household and Clytaemestra, and at the same time enrich me. [Enter Clytaemestra

In good sooth 'tis like a woman to be elated in heart." By such taunts I was made to seem as if my wits were wandering. Nevertheless I still held on with my sacrifice, and throughout all the quarters of the city, in woman's wont, they raised a shout of gladsome praise the while as in the fanes of the gods they lulled to rest the fragrant spice-fed flame.

So now what need for thee to rehearse to me the account at large? From the King himself I shall hear all the tale; but that I may hasten best to welcome my honoured lord on his return—for what joy is sweeter in a woman's eyes than to unbar the gates for her husband when God hath spared him to return from war?—this be my message to my lord: let him come with all speed, his country's fond desire, come to find at home his wife faithful, even as he left her, a watch-dog of his house, loyal to him, a foe to those who wish him ill; yea, for the rest, unchanged in every part; in all this length of time never having broken seal. A day of happy omen it befits not to mar by tale of ill—the honour due to the gods keeps them apart.¹ When a messenger with gloomy countenance reports to a people dire disaster of its army's rout—one common wound inflicted on the State, while from many a home many a victim is devoted to death by the two-handed scourge beloved of Ares, destruction double-armed, a gory pair—when, I say, he is packed with woes of such sort as this, it is meet that he sing the triumph-song of the Avenging Spirits. But when one cometh with glad tidings of deliverance to a city rejoicing in its happiness—how shall I mix fair with foul in telling of the storm that broke upon the Achaeans not unprovoked by Heaven's wrath? For fire and sea, erstwhile bitterest of foes, swore alliance and for proof thereof destroyed the hapless Argive armament. In the night-time arose the mischief from the cruel surge. Beneath blasts from Thrace ship dashed against ship; and they, rammed violently by the furious hurricane and rush of pelting rain, were swept out of sight by the whirling gust of an evil shepherd.¹ But when the radiant light of the sun uprose we beheld the Aegean flowering with corpses of Achaean men and wreckage of ships. Ourselves, however, and our ship, its hull unshattered, some power, divine not human, preserved by stealth or intercession, laying hand upon its helm; and Saviour Fortune willed to sit aboard our barque so that it should neither take in the swelling surf at anchorage nor drive upon a rock-bound coast. Then, having escaped death upon the deep, in the clear bright day, scarce crediting our fortune, we brooded in anxious thought over our late mischance, our fleet distressed and sorely buffeted. So now, if any there be of them that still draw the breath of life, they speak of us as lost—and why should they not?—while we imagine like case for them. But may all turn out for the best! For Menelaüs, indeed—first and foremost expect him to return. At least if some beam of the sun discover him alive and well, by the design of Zeus, who is not yet minded utterly to destroy the race, there is some hope that he will come home again. Hearing so much, be assured that 'tis the truth thou hearest. [Exit was it some power invisible guiding his tongue aright by forecasting of destiny?—who named that bride of the spear and source of strife with the name of Helen? For, true to her name, a Hell she proved to ships, Hell to men, Hell to city, when stepping forth from her delicate and costly-curtained bower, she sailed the sea before the breath of earth-born Zephyrus. And after her a goodly host of warrior huntsmen followed in pursuit on the oars' vanished track of a quarry that had beached its barque on Simoïs' leafy banks—in a strife to end in blood.

To Ilium, its purpose fulfilling, Wrath brought a marriage rightly named a mourning,¹ exacting in after-time requital for the dishonour done to hospitality and to Zeus, the partaker of the hearth, upon those who with loud voice celebrated the song in honour of the bride, even the bridegroom's kin to whom it fell that day to raise the marriage-hymn. But Priam's city hath learnt, in her old age, an altered strain, and now, I trow, waileth a loud song, even one of plenteous lamentation, calling Paris "evil-wed"; for that she hath borne the burthen of a life fraught with desolation, a life of plenteous lamentation by reason of the wretched slaughter of her sons.

Even so a man reared in his house a lion's whelp, robbed of its mother's milk yet still desiring the breast. Gentle it was in the prelude of its life, kindly to children, and a delight to the old. Much did it get, held in arms like a nursling child, with its bright eye turned toward his hand, and fawning under compulsion of its belly's need.

But brought to full growth by time it showed forth the nature it had from its parents. Unbidden, in requital for its fostering, it prepared a feast with ruinous slaughter of the flocks; so that the house was defiled with blood, and they that dwelt therein could not control their anguish, and great was the carnage far and wide. A priest of ruin, by ordinance of God, was it reared in the house.

At first, methinks, there came to Ilium the spirit of unruffled calm, a delicate ornament of wealth, a darter of soft glances from the eye, love's flower that stingeth the heart. Then, swerving from her course, she made her marriage end in ruth, sped on to the children of Priam under escort of Zeus, the warder of host and guest, blasting with ruin by her

All hail, my King, stormer of Troy, offspring of Atreus! How shall I greet thee? How do thee homage, not overshooting or running short of the due measure of courtesy? Many there be of mortal men who put appearance before truth and thereby transgress the right. Every one is prompt to heave a sigh over the unfortunate, albeit no sting of true sorrow reaches to the heart; and in seeming sympathy they join in others' joy, forcing their faces into smiles. But whoso is a discerning shepherd of his flock cannot be deceived by men's eyes which, while they feign loyalty of heart, only fawn upon him with watery¹ affection.

Now in the past, when thou didst marshal the armament in Helen's cause, thou wert depicted in my eyes (for I will not hide it from thee) in most ungracious lineaments, and as not guiding aright the helm of thy mind in seeking through thy sacrifices to bring courage to dying men.

But now, from the depth of my heart and with no lack of love . . . their toil is joy to them that have won success. In course of time thou shalt learn by enquiry who of thy people have been honest, who unfitting, guardians of the State.

Argos first, as is right and due, I greet, and the gods that dwell therein who have helped me to my safe return and to the justice I exacted from Priam's town. For hearkening to no pleadings by word of mouth,¹ without dissentient voice, they cast into the urn of blood their ballots for the murderous destroying of Ilium; but to the urn of acquittal that no hand filled, Hope alone drew nigh. The smoke still even now declares the city's fall. Destruction's blasts still live, and the embers, as they die, breathe forth rich reek of wealth. For this success it behoves us to render to the gods a return in ever-mindful gratitude, seeing that we have thrown round the city the toils of vengeance, and in a woman's cause it hath been laid low by the fierce Argive beast, brood of the horse,² a shield-armed folk, that launched its leap what time the Pleiads waned. Vaulting over its towered walls, the ravening lion lapped his fill of princely blood.

This lengthened prelude to the gods. But, touching thy sentiments—the which I heard and still bear in memory—I both agree and thou hast in me an advocate therein. For few there be among men in whom it is inborn to admire without envy a friend's good fortune. For the venom of malevolence settles upon the heart and doubles the burthen of him afflicted of that plague: he is himself weighed down by his own calamity, and repines at sight of another's prosperity. From knowledge—for well am I acquainted with the mirror of companionship—I may call a shadow of a shade those who feigned exceeding loyalty to me.¹ Only Odysseus, even he who sailed against his will, once harnessed, proved my zealous yoke-fellow. This I affirm of him be he alive or dead.

But, for the rest, in what concerns the State and public worship, we shall appoint general assemblies and deliberate in full conclave. Where all goes well, we must take counsel that so it may long endure; but whensoever there is need of healing remedy, we will endeavour to avert the mischief of the malady by kind appliance of cautery or the knife.

And now I will pass to my palace halls and to my household hearth, and first of all pay greeting to the gods. They sped me forth and they have brought me home again. May victory, as it hath attended me, bide ever with me constant to the end!

Burghers of Argos, ye Elders present here, I shall not be ashamed to confess in your presence my fondness for my husband—with time timidity dies away in man.

Ilium's walls. First and foremost, an evil full of terror is it for a wife to sit forlorn at home, severed from her husband, forever hearing malignant rumours manifold, and for one messenger after another to come bearing tidings of disaster, each worse than the last, and cry them to the household. And as for wounds, had this my lord received so many as rumour kept pouring into the house, no net had been pierced so full of holes as he. Or had he died as oft as reports were rife, then in sooth he might have had three bodies—a second Geryon¹—and have boasted of having taken on him a triple coverture of earth [ample that above—of that below I speak not]—one death for each several shape. By reason of such malignant tales as these, many a time have others had to loose the high-hung halter from my neck, held in its strong grip. 'Tis for this cause, in truth, that our boy, Orestes, stands not here beside me, as he should—he in whom rest the pledges of my love and thine. Nay, think this not strange. For he is in the protecting care of our well-affected ally, Strophius of Phocis, who gave me warning of trouble on two scores—thine own peril beneath Ilium's walls, and then the chance that the people in clamorous revolt might overturn the Council, as it is inborn in men to trample the more upon the fallen. Truly this excuse is not fraught with guile.

As for myself, the welling fountains of my tears are utterly dried up—not a drop remains therein. In night-long vigils mine eyes are sore with weeping for the beacon-lights set for thee but neglected ever. The faint whirring of the buzzing gnat waked me oft from dreams wherein I beheld more disasters to thee than the time of sleep could have compassed.

But now, having borne all this, my heart freed from its anxiety, I would hail my lord here as the watch-dog of the fold, the saviour forestay of the ship, firm-based pillar of the lofty roof, only-begotten son unto a father, yea land descried by men at sea beyond their hope, dawn most fair to look upon after storm, the gushing rill to wayfarer athirst—sweet is it to escape all stress of need. Such truly are the greetings whereof I deem him worthy. But let envy¹ be far removed, since many were the ills we endured before.

And now, I pray thee, dear my lord, dismount from this thy car, but set not on common earth this foot of thine, my liege, that hath trampled upon Ilium. [To her attendants] Why this loitering, women, as whose task I have assigned to strew with tapestries his pathway's floor? Quick! Well, if thou wilt have thy way, quick, let some one loose my sandals, which, slave-like, serve the treading of my foot ! As I tread upon these purple vestments may I not be smitten from afar by any glance of Heaven's jealous eye. Sore shame it is for my foot to mar the substance of the house by making waste of wealth and costly woven work.

Thus much for this. Yon stranger damsel do thou receive into the house with kindness. God from afar looks graciously upon a gentle master ; for of free choice no one takes upon him the yoke of slavery. But she, the choicest flower of rich treasure, has followed in my train, my army's gift.

Since I have been overborne to hearken to thee in this, I will tread upon a purple pathway as I pass to my palace halls.

CLYTAEMESTRA

There is the sea (and who shall drain it dry ?) producing stain of plenteous purple, costly as silver and ever fresh, wherewith to dye our vestments ; and of these our house, thanks be to Heaven, hath ample store ; it knows no penury. Vestments now I would have devoted to be trampled underfoot had it been so enjoined me in the seat of oracles when I was devising the ransom of thy life. Why ever thus persistently doth this terror hover at the portals of my prophetic soul ? Why doth my song, unbidden and unfed, chant strains of augury ? Why doth assuring confidence not sit on my bosom's throne and spurn away the terror like an uninterpretable dream ? But Time hath collected the sands of the shore upon the cables cast thereon when the shipborne armament had sped forth for Ilium.²

Of their coming home I am assured by mine own eyes and need no other witness. Yet still my soul within me, self-inspired, intoneth the lyreless dirge of the Avenging Spirit, and cannot wholly win its wonted confidence of hope. ² The sense of the Greek passage (of which no entirely satisfactory emendation has been offered) is that so much time has passed since the fleet, under Agamemnon's command, was detained at Aulis by the wrath of Artemis, that Calchas' prophecy of evil, if true, would have been fulfilled long ago.

fulfilment. But I pray that my expectation may fall out false and come not to fulfilment.

Of a truth lusty health resteth not content within its due bounds; for disease ever presseth close against it, its neighbour with a common wall.¹ So human fortune, when holding onward in straight course, of a sudden striketh upon a hidden reef of calamity. And yet, if with well-measured cast, caution heave overboard a portion of the gathered wealth, the whole house, with woe overladen, doth not founder nor doth it engulf the hull.² Verily a rich and bounteous gift from Zeus, even from the furrows that furnish forth yearly, stayeth the plague of famine.

But man's blood, once it hath first fallen by murder to earth in darkling tide—who by magic spell shall call it back? Even him³ who possessed the skill to raise from the dead—did not Zeus put a stop to him for a warning? And were it not that one fate ordained of the gods doth restrain

¹ Abounding health, ignoring its limitations, is separated from disease only by a slight dividing line. The suppressed thought is that remedies, if applied betimes, may save the body.

² The house of Agamemnon, full of calamity, is likened to an overloaded ship, which will founder if some part of its freight is not jettisoned. By confusion of the symbol and the thing signified, δόμος is boldly said to "sink its hull."

CLYTAEMESTRA

Get thee within, thou too, Cassandra²; since in no unkindness hath Zeus appointed thee a partaker in the holy water of a house where thou mayest take thy stand, with many another slave, at the altar of the god who guards its wealth. Dismount thee from the car and be not over-proud; for even Alcmene's son,³ men say, in days of old endured to be sold and eat the bread of slavery. But if such fortune should perforce fall to the lot of any, there is good cause for thankfulness in having masters of ancient wealth; for they who, beyond their hope, have reaped a rich harvest of possessions, are cruel to their slaves in every way, even exceeding due measure. Thou hast from us such usage as custom warranteth.

CHORUS

It is to thee she hath been speaking and clearly. Since thou art in the toils of destiny, belike thou wilt obey, if thou art so inclined; but belike thou wilt not.

CHORUS

Go with her. Of what is thine to choose she giveth thee the best choice. Do as she bids thee and quit thy seat in the car.

CLYTAEMESTRA

I have no leisure—mark me that—to dally with this woman here outside; for already the victims stand by the central hearth awaiting the sacrifice—a joy we never expected to be ours. As for thee, if thou wilt take any part therein, make no delay. But if, failing to understand, thou dost not catch my meaning, then, instead of speech, make sign with thy barbarian hand.

CHORUS

CLYTAEMESTRA

Nay, mad she is and hearkens to her wild mood, since she hath come hither from a city newly captured, and knoweth not how to brook the curb until she hath foamed away her fretfulness in blood. No! I will waste no more words upon her to be insulted thus.

Wherefore thy cry of "woe" in Loxias' name? No god is he that hath to do with those who wail.

CASSANDRA

Woe, woe, woe! O Apollo, O Apollo!

CHORUS

Once more with ill-omened words she crieth upon the god when it beseems not to attend at times of lamentation.

me witness, as, coursing close behind, I scent the track of crimes wrought in days of yore. For from this roof doth never depart a choir chanting in unison, but unmelodious; for it telleth not of good. And lo, having quaffed human blood, to be the more emboldened, a revel-rout of sister Furies haunteth the house, hard to be driven forth. Lodged within its halls they chant their chant, the primal sin; and, each in turn, they spurn with loathing a brother's bed, for that they are bitter with wrath against him that defiled it.¹ Have I missed the mark, or, like true archer, do I strike my quarry? Or am I prophet of lies, a babbler from door to door? Bear witness upon thine oath that I do know the deeds of sin, ancient in story, of this house.

CASSANDRA

Ha, ha! Oh, oh, the agony! Once more the dreadful throes of true prophecy whirl and distract me with their ill-boding onset. Mark ye those yonder—sitting before the house—young creatures like unto phantoms of dreams? Children, they seem, slaughtered by their own kindred, their hands full of the meat of their own flesh; clear to my sight are they, holding their vitals and their inward parts (piteous burthen!), whereof their father tasted. 'Tis for this cause I tell you that vengeance is plotted by a dastard lion wallowing in his couch, keeping ward of the house (ah me!) against my master's coming home—aye, my master, for I needs must bear the yoke of slavery. The commander of the fleet and the overthrower of Ilium, he knows not what deeds shall be brought to evil accomplishment by the lewd hound, whose tongue did lick his hand and who stretched forth her ears in gladness, like treacherous Ate. Such boldness hath she—a woman is the slayer of a man. What odious monster shall I fitly call her? An amphisbaena¹? Or a Scylla, tenanting the rocks, a pest of mariners, a raging dam of Death, breathing relentless war against her lord? And how the all-daring woman raised a shout of triumph, like as when the battle turns, the while she feigned to joy at his safe return! And yet, 'tis all one, whether or not I win belief. What matters

¹ Amphisbaena, a fabulous snake "moving both ways," backwards and forwards. Tennyson's "an amphisbaena, each end a sting," reproduces Pliny's description.

Brewing as it were a drug, she vows that with her wrath she will mix requital for me too, while she whets her sword against her lord, she vows to take murderous vengeance for my bringing hither. Why then do I bear these mockeries of myself, this wand, these prophetic chaplets on my neck ? [Throwing upon the ground first her wand and then the other insignia of her prophetic office, she tramples them under foot.] Thee at least I will destroy before I meet my doom. To destruction with you ! And as ye fall, thus do I avenge myself on you. Enrich with doom some other in my stead. Lo, Apollo's self is stripping me of my prophetic garb—he that looked on me mocked to bitter scorn, even in this bravery, by friends turned foes, with one accord, without cause—but, like some vagrant mountebank, called "beggar," "wretch," "starveling," I bore it all—. And now the prophet, having undone me, his prophetess, hath brought me to this deadly pass. In place of my father's altar a block awaits me, butchered by the hot stroke of bloody sacrifice. Yet we shall not perish unavenged of Heaven; for there shall come in turn another, our avenger, a scion of the race, to slay his mother and exact requital for his sire; an exile, a wanderer, strangered from this land, he shall return to put the coping-stone upon these infatuate iniquities of his house. For a mighty oath hath been sworn of the gods that his slain father's outstretched corpse shall bring him home. Why then thus raise my voice in piteous lament? Since at the first I saw the city of Ilium meet the fate it hath, while her captors, by Heaven's sentence are come to such an end, I will go in and meet my fate. I will dare to die. This portal I greet as the gates of Death. And I pray that, dealt a mortal stroke, without a struggle, my life-blood ebbing away in easy death, I may close these eyes.

CHORUS

CHORUS

'Tis the nature of all human kind to be unsatisfied with prosperity. From stately halls none barreth it with warning voice that uttereth the words "Enter no more." So unto our prince the Blessed Ones have granted to capture Priam's town; and, honoured of Heaven, he returns to his home. Yet if he now must pay the penalty for the blood shed by others before him, and by dying for the dead he is to bring to pass retribution of other deaths,³ what mortal man, on hearing this, can boast that he was born with scatheless destiny?

[A shriek is heard from within]

AGAMEMNON

Ay me! I am smitten deep with a mortal blow!

¹ Of this corrupt passage no emendation yet made commends itself irresistibly. The translation is based on the reading ἐχθροὺς φόνευσιν τοὺς ἐμούς, where φόνευσιν is due to Bothe, the rest to J. Pearson.

² Some editors, emending the passage to σκιᾶ τις ἂν πρέψειεν, "one may liken it to a shadow," understand "shadow" either literally or as a "sketch."

³ If Agamemnon is now to pay the price for his father's killing of Thyestes' children, and by his own death is to atone for his slaying of Iphigenia, and is thus to bring about requital consisting in yet other deaths (Clytaemestra and Aegisthus).

1. I tell you my advice: summon the townfolk to bring rescue hither to the palace.

2. To my thinking we must burst in amain and charge them with the deed while the sword is still dripping in their hands.

3. And I am for taking part in some such plan, and vote for action of some sort. 'Tis no time to keep on dallying.

4. 'Tis manifest. Their opening act marks a plan to set up a tyranny in the State.

5. Aye, because we are wasting time, while they, spurning to earth that lauded name, Delay, allow their hands no slumber.

6. I know not what plan I could hit on to propose. 'Tis the doer's part likewise to do the planning.

7. I too am of this mind, for I know no way how by mere words to bring the dead back to life.

8. What! To prolong our lives shall we thus submit to the rule of those defilers of the house?

10. And shall we, upon the evidence of mere groans, divine that our lord is dead ?

11. We should be sure of the facts ere we indulge our wrath. For surmise differs from assurance.

12. I am supported on all sides to approve this course—that we have clear assurance how it stands with Atreus' son.

[The bodies of Agamemnon and Cassandra are disclosed ; the Queen stands by their side

CLYTAEMESTRA

Much have I said before to serve my need and I shall feel no shame to contradict it now. For how else could one, devising hate against a hated foe who bears the semblance of a friend, fence the snares of ruin too high to be o'erleaped ? This is the crisis of an ancient feud, pondered by me of old, and it has come—howbeit long delayed. I stand where I dealt the blow ; my purpose is achieved. Thus have I wrought the deed—deny it I will not Round him, like as to catch a haul of fish, I cast a net impassable—a fatal wealth of robe—so that he should neither escape nor ward off doom. Twice I smote him, and with two groans his limbs relaxed. Once he had fallen, I dealt him yet a third stroke to grace my prayer to the infernal Zeus, the saviour of the dead. Fallen thus, he gasped away his life, and as he breathed forth quick spurts of blood, he smote me with dark drops of ensanguined dew ;

while I rejoiced no less than the sown earth is gladdened in heaven's refreshing rain at the birth-time of the flower buds.

Since then the case stands thus, ye Argive ancients, rejoice ye, if ye would rejoice ; as for me, I glory in the deed. And had it been a fitting act to pour libations on the corpse, over him this had been done justly, aye more than justly. With so many accursed ills hath he filled the mixing-bowl in his own house, and now he hath come home and himself drained it to the dregs.

CHORUS

We marvel at thy tongue, how bold-mouthed thou art, that over thy husband thou canst utter such a vaunting speech.

CLYTAEMESTRA

Ye are proving me as if I were a witless woman. But my heart quails not, and I say to you who know it well—and whether ye are minded to praise or to blame me, 'tis all one—here is Agamemnon, my husband, done to death, the work of this right hand, a workman true. So stands the case.

CHORUS

Woman, what poisonous herb nourished by the earth hast thou tasted, what potion drawn from the flowing sea, that thou hast taken upon thyself this maddened rage and execration of the public voice ? Thou hast cast him off ; thou hast cut him off ; and out from the land shalt thou be cast, a burthen of hatred unto thy people.

And yet he, recking no more than if it had been a beast that perished—though sheep were plenty in his fleecy folds—he sacrificed his own child, even her I bore with dearest travail, to charm the blasts of Thræce. Is it not he whom thou shouldst have banished from this land in requital for his polluting deed? No! When thou arraignest what I have done, thou art a stern judge. Well, I warn thee: menace me thus on the understanding that I am prepared, conditions equal, to let thee lord it over me if thou shalt vanquish me by force. But if God shall bring the contrary to pass, thou shalt learn discretion though taught the lesson late.

CHORUS

yon man, hope doth not tread for me the halls of fear, so long as the fire upon my hearth is kindled by Aegisthus, loyal in heart to me as in days gone by. For he is no slight shield of confidence to me. Here lies the man that did me wrong, minion of each Chryseïs at Ilium; and here she lies, his captive, and augress, and concubine, his oracular faithful bedfellow, yet equally familiar with the seamen's benches. The pair has met no undeserved fate. For he lies thus; while she, who, like a swan, hath sung her last lament in death, lies here, his beloved; but to me she has brought for my bed an added relish to my luxury.

CHORUS

Alas! Ah that some fate, free from excess of suffering, nor yet with lingering bed of pain, might come full soon and bring to us everlasting and endless sleep, now that our most gracious guardian hath been laid low, who in a woman's cause had much endured and by a woman's hand hath lost his life.

O infatuate Helen, who didst of thyself alone work the destruction of these many lives, these lives exceeding many, beneath the walls of Troy. Reproach thus meeteth reproach in turn—vain is all effort to decide. The spoiler is spoiled, the slayer maketh atonement. Upon this divine deliverance hast thou rightly touched. As for me, however, I am willing to make a sworn compact with the Fiend of the house of Pleisthenes¹ that I will be content with what is done, hard to endure though it be; and that henceforth he shall leave this habitation and bring tribulation upon some other race by murder of kin. A small ¹ The Pleisthenidae, here apparently a synonym of Atreidae, take their name from Pleisthenes, of whom Porphyry in his Questions says that he was the son of Atreus and the real father of Agamemnon and Menelaüs; and that, as he died young, without having achieved any distinction, his sons were brought up by their grandfather and hence called Atreidae.

AEGISTHUS

Hail gracious light of the day of retribution! At last the hour is come when I can say that the gods who avenge mortal men look down from on high upon the crimes of earth—now that, to my joy, I behold this man lying here in a robe spun by the Avenging Spirits and making full payment for the deeds contrived in craft by his father's hand.

For Atreus, lord of this land, this man's father, challenged in his sovereignty, drove forth, from city and from home, Thyestes, who (to speak it clearly) was my father and his own brother. And when that he had come back as a suppliant to his hearth, unhappy Thyestes secured such safety for his lot as not himself to suffer death and stain with his blood his native soil. But Atreus, the godless father of this slain man, with welcome more hearty than kind, on the pretence that he was celebrating with good cheer a festive day with offering of meat, served up to my father as entertainment a banquet of his own children's flesh. The toes and fingers he broke off . . . sitting apart.¹ And when all unwittingly my father had forthwith taken portions thereof that he could not distinguish, he ate a meal which, as thou seest, hath proved fatal to his race. Anon, discovering his unhallowed deed, he uttered a great cry, reeled back, vomiting forth the slaughtered flesh, and invoked a doom intolerable upon the line of Pelops, spurning the banquet board to aid his curse—"thus perish all the race of Pleisthenes!" For this cause it is that thou beholdest this man prostrate here. I it is who planned this murder and with justice. For together with my hapless father he drove me out, me his third child, as yet a babe in swaddling-clothes. But grown to manhood, justice has brought me back again. Exile though I was, I laid my hand upon my enemy, compassing every device of cunning to his ruin. So even death were sweet to me now that I behold him in the toils of justice.

CHORUS

Aegisthus, insult amid distress I hold dishonourable. Thou sayest that of thine own intent thou slewest this man and didst alone plot this piteous murder. I tell thee in the hour of justice thou thyself—be sure of that—shalt not escape the people's curses and death by stoning at their hand.

SCENE.—Argos.

TIME.—The heroic age.

DATE.—458 B.C., at the City Dionysia.

ARGUMENT

Now when she had slain Agamemnon, Queen Clytaemestra with her lover Aegisthus ruled in the land of Argos. But the spirit of her murdered lord was wroth and sent a baleful vision to distress her soul in sleep. She dreamed that she gave birth to a serpent and that she suckled it, as if it had been a babe; but together with the mother's milk the noxious thing drew clotted blood from out her breast. With a scream of horror she awoke, and when the seers of the house had interpreted the portent as a sign of the anger of the nether powers, she bade Electra, her daughter, and her serving-women bear libations to the tomb of Agamemnon, if haply she might placate his angry spirit.

Now Princess Electra dwelt in the palace, but was treated no better than a slave; but, before that Agamemnon was slain, her brother, Prince Orestes, had been sent to abide with his uncle Strophius in a far country, even in Phocis. There he had grown to youthful manhood, and on the selfsame day that his mother sought to avert the evil omen of her dream, accompanied by his cousin Pylades, he came to Argos seeking vengeance for his father's murder.

On the tomb of Agamemnon he places a lock of his hair, and when Electra discovers it, she is confident that it must be an offering to the dead made by none other than her brother. She has been recognized by him by reason of her mourning garb; but not until she has had further proof, by signs and tokens, will she be convinced that it is he in very truth.

Orestes makes known that he has been divinely commissioned to his purpose of vengeance. Lord Apollo himself has commanded him thereto with threats that, if he disobey, he shall be visited with assaults of the Erinyes of his father—banned from the habitations of men and the altars of the gods, he shall perish blasted in mind and body.

Grouped about the grave of their father, brother and sister, aided by the friendly Chorus, implore his ghostly assistance to their just cause. Orestes and Pylades, disguised as Phocian travellers, are given hospitable welcome by Clytaemestra, to whom it is reported that her son is dead. The Queen sends as messenger Orestes' old nurse to summon Aegisthus from outside accompanied by his bodyguard. The Chorus persuades her to alter the message and bid him come unattended. His death is quickly followed by that of Clytaemestra, whose appeals for mercy are rejected by her son. Orestes, displaying the bloody robe in which his father had been entangled when struck down, proclaims the justice of his deed. But his wits begin to wander; the Erinyes of his mother, unseen by the others, appear before his disordered vision; he rushes from the scene.

THE LIBATION-BEARERS

dreams, with breath of wrath in sleep, at dead of night uttered a cry for terror from the inmost chamber, falling heavily upon the women's bower.¹ And the readers of dreams like these, interpreting Heaven's will under pledge, declared that those beneath the earth complain in bitter anger and are wroth against their slayers.

Purposing such a graceless grace to ward off ill (O mother Earth!), she sendeth me forth, godless woman that she is. But I am afraid to utter the words she bade me speak. For what redemption is there for blood once fallen on the earth? Ah, hearth of utter grief! Ah, house laid low in ruin! Darkness, unilluminated of the sun and loathed of men, enshrouds the house now that its lord hath been done to death.

The awe of majesty that of yore none might withstand, none resist, none quell, that pierced the public ear and heart, is now cast off. But fear men feel. For Success—this, in men's eyes, is God and more than God. But the balanced scale of Justice keepeth watch: swift it descendeth on some who still stand in the light; sometimes sorrows await them that tarry in the twilight of life's close; and some are enshrouded by ineffectual night.

¹ The language of the passage is accommodated to a double purpose: (1) to indicate an oracular deliverance on the part of the inspired prophetess at Delphi, and (2) to show the alarming nature of Clytaemestra's dream; while certain limiting expressions (as ἀωρόνυκτον, ὑπνον) show the points of difference. "Phoebus" is used for a prophetic "possession," which assails Clytaemestra as a nightmare (cp. βαρὺς πίτνων); so that her vision is itself called an ὄνειρόμαντις.

THE LIBATION-BEARERS

Because of blood drunk to her fill by fostering earth, the vengeful gore lieth clotted and will not dissolve away. Calamity, racking his soul, distracts the guilty man so that he is steeped in misery utter and complete.

But for him that violateth a bridal bower there is no cure; so, albeit all streams flow in one current to cleanse the blood from a polluted hand, they speed their course to no avail.

For me—since the gods laid constraining doom about my city (for from my father's house they led me to the fate of slavery)—it beseemeth, against my will, to conquer my bitter hate and submit to the behests—or just or unjust—of my masters. Yet 'neath my veil, my heart chilled by secret grief, I bewail the foul undoing of my lord.

THE LIBATION-BEARERS

am I to say? How shall I find gracious words, how voice the prayer unto my father? Shall I say that I bring these offerings to a loved husband from a loving wife—from her that is mine own mother? For that I have not the assurance; nor know I what words to say as I pour this draught upon my father's tomb. Or shall I speak the speech that men are wont to use: "that to those who send these funeral honours may he make return with good"—a gift forsooth to match their evil¹?

Or, in silence and dishonour, even as my father perished, shall I pour them out for the earth to drink, and then retrace my steps, like as one who carries forth refuse from a rite, hurling the vessel from me with averted eyes?

Herein, my friends, be ye my fellow-counsellors; for common is the hate we cherish within the house. Hide not your counsel in your hearts through fear of any. For the fated hour awaits alike the free and him made bondsman by another's might. If thou hast a better course to urge, oh speak!

CHORUS

In reverence for thy father's tomb, like as it were an altar, I will voice my inmost thoughts, since thou commandest me.

ELECTRA

Speak, even as thou hast reverence for my father's grave.

¹ "Their evil" is unexpectedly substituted for "their good." The question is ironical, since it was natural for a Greek to return evil for evil (cp. 123).

for me, I am no better than a slave, Orestes is an outcast from his substance, while they in insolence of pride wanton bravely in the winnings of thy toil. Yet may Orestes come home—and with happy fortune! This is my prayer to thee, and do thou hearken unto me, my father. For myself, oh grant that I may prove in heart more chaste, far more, than my mother and in hand more innocent.

These invocations on our behalf; but for our foes I implore that there appear one who will avenge thee, father, and that thy slayers may be slain in just retribution. ("Tis thus I interrupt my prayer for good, for them uttering this prayer for evil.) But to us be thou a bringer of blessings to the upper world by favour of the gods and Earth and Justice crowned with victory." [She pours out the libations

Such are my prayers, and over them I pour out these libations. 'Tis your due service to crown them with flowers of lamentation, raising your voices in a chant for the dead.

CHORUS

Pour forth your tears, plashing as they fall for our fallen lord, to accompany this protection against evil—this means to avert from the good the loathed pollution of outpoured libations.¹ Hearken unto me, oh hearken, my august lord, with thy gloom-enshrouded spirit.²

THE LIBATION-BEARERS

ELECTRA

Over my heart, too, there sweeps a surge of bitterness, and I am smitten as if a sword had stabbed me through and through. From my eyes thirsty drops of a stormy flood fall unchecked at sight of this tress. For how can I expect to find that some one else, some townsman, owns this lock? Nor yet in truth did she shear it from her head—she the murderess, my own mother, who towards her children hath taken to herself a godless spirit ill-according with the name of mother. But, for my part, how am I to assent to this outright—that it adorned the head of him who is dearest to me in all the world, Orestes? Ah no! hope but flatters me.

Ah me! If only, like a messenger, it had a kindly voice so that I were not tossed by my distracted thoughts—but would plainly bid me spurn away this tress, had it been severed from a hated head; or, if it claimed kin to me, would share my grief, an adornment to this tomb and a tribute to my sire.

But Heaven, which I invoke, knoweth by what storms we are tossed like men upon the sea. Yet, if it is our fate to win safety, from a little seed may spring a mighty stock.

And lo! why here are tracks—a second proof—tracks of feet, matching each other—and like unto my own! Yes, for here are two sorts of footprints, his own and some companion's. The heels and markings of the tendons agree in their proportions with mine own tracks. I am in torment, my brain is in a whirl!

ELECTRA

Nay, thou art fain to mock at my distress.

ORESTES

At mine own then also, if indeed at thine.

ELECTRA

Am I then to address thee as in truth Orestes ?

ORESTES

Nay, though thou seest in me his very self, thou art but slow to learn. Yet at sight of this shorn tress of mourning and when thou wast scanning the footprints of my tracks, thy thought took wings and thou didst deem it was I thou didst behold. Put to the spot whence it was shorn the lock of hair—thine own brother's—and mark how it agrees with that of my head. And see this piece of weaving, thy handiwork, the batten strokes and the beasts in the design. Control thyself! Be not distraught for joy! For our nearest kin, I know, are bitter foes to us twain.

ELECTRA

O best beloved darling of thy father's house, its hope of saving seed, longed for with tears, trust in thy prowess and thou shalt win again thy father's house. O thou fond presence that hath for me four parts of love: for father I needs must call thee, and to thee falls the love I should bear my mother—she whom I most rightly hate—and the love I bore my sister, victim of a pitiless sacrifice ; and as brother thou hast been my trust, winning reverence even for me, thou only. May Might and Justice, with Zeus the third,¹ supreme over all, lend thee their aid !

ORESTES

O Zeus, O Zeus, look upon our cause ! Behold the orphaned brood of an eagle sire that perished in the meshes—aye in the coils—of a fell viper. Utterly orphaned are they, gripped by hunger's famine ; for they are not grown to full strength to bring their father's quarry to the nest. So thou mayest behold even me and poor Electra here—children bereft of their father, outcasts both alike from our home. If thou destroyest these nestlings of a sire who made sacrifice and paid high worship unto thee, from what like hand wilt thou receive the homage of rich feasts ? Destroy the offspring of the eagle and thou canst not henceforth send tokens wherein mankind will trust ; nor, if this royal stock wither utterly away, will it serve thy altars on days of sacrifice of oxen. Oh foster it, and thou canst raise a house from low estate to great, though now it seemeth utterly o'erthrown.

CHORUS

O children, O saviours of your father's hearth, speak not so loud, dear children, lest someone overhear and for mere talk's sake report all this to our masters—may I some day behold them dead amidst the pitchy ooze of flame!

ORESTES

Of a surety the mighty oracle of Loxias will not abandon me, charging me to brave this peril to the end, and, with loud utterance, proclaiming afflictions chilling my warm heart's blood, if I avenge not my father on the guilty; bidding me, infuriated by the loss of my possessions,¹ slay them in requital even as they slew. And with mine own life, he declared, I should else pay the debt myself by many grievous sufferings. For he spake revealing to mankind the wrath of malignant powers from underneath the earth, and telling of plagues: leprous ulcers that mount with fierce fangs on the flesh, eating away its primal nature; and how, upon this disease, a white down² should sprout forth. And of other assaults of the Avenging Spirits he spake, destined to be brought to pass from a father's blood; for the darkling bolt of the infernal powers, who are stirred by slain victims of kindred race calling for vengeance, and both madness and groundless terrors out of the night torment and harass the man, who seeth clearly, though he moveth his eyebrows in the dark ;¹ so that, his body marred by the brazen scourge, he be even chased in exile from his country. For an offender such as this 'tis not allowed—so the god declared—to have part either in the festal bowl or in the genial draught ; his father's wrath, albeit unseen, bars him from the altar ; no one receives him or lodges with him ; and at last, unhonoured of all, unfriended, he perishes, shrivelled pitifully by a death that wastes him utterly away.

In oracles such as these must I not put my trust ? Nay, even if I trust them not, the deed must still be done. For many impulses conspire to one conclusion : besides the god's behest, my keen grief for my father, and withal the pinch of poverty—that my countrymen, the most renowned of mankind, who overthrew Troy with gallant spirit, should not thus be at beck and call of a brace of women ; for woman he is at heart ; or, if he is not, he shall soon put it to the test.

CHORUS

Ye mighty Fates, through the power of Zeus vouchsafe fulfilment thus even as Justice now turneth ! “ For word of hate let word of hate be said,” crieth Justice aloud as she exacteth the debt, “ and for murderous stroke let murderous stroke be paid.” “ To him that doeth, it shall be done by,” so saith a precept thrice-aged.

ORESTES

O father, unhappy father, by what word or deed of mine can I succeed in wafting from afar to thee, where thy resting-place holds thee, a light to oppose thy darkness? Yet a funeral lament in honour of the Atreidae who erst possessed the house is none the less a joyous service.

CHORUS

My child, the consciousness of the dead is not quelled by fire's ravening jaw; but he bewrayeth thereafter what stirreth him. The slain man hath his dirge, the guilty man is revealed. Lament for fathers and for parents that hath just cause, when raised full loud and strong, maketh search on every hand.

ELECTRA

Hear then, O father, as in turn we mourn with plenteous tears. Lo, 'tis thy children twain that bewail thee in a dirge o'er thy tomb. As suppliants and as exiles likewise have they sought harbourage at thy sepulchre. What is there here of good, what free from ill? Is it not hopeless to wrestle against doom?

CHORUS

Yet, Heaven, if so it please, may still turn our utterance to sounds of more joyful tone. In place of dirges o'er a tomb, a song of triumph within the royal halls shall welcome back a reunited friend.¹

ORESTES

Ah, would that 'neath Ilium's walls, my father, thou hadst been slain, gashed by some Lycian spear! Then hadst thou left fair renown for thy children in their halls, and in their going forth hadst made their life admired of men, and in a land beyond the sea thou hadst found a tomb heaped high with earth—no heavy burthen for thy house to bear—

CHORUS

—Welcomed there below by thy comrades who nobly fell, a ruler of august majesty conspicuous beneath the earth, and minister of the mightiest, the deities who there in the nether world hold rule.² For in thy life thou wast a king of them who by their power allot the doom of death³ and wield the staff that all obey.

Would rather that his murderers had been slain by their own kin, even as they slew thee, so that some one in a far-off land, knowing naught of these our present troubles, should learn their doom of death.

CHORUS

Therein, my child, is thy wish for better than gold, for what surpasseth great good fortune, yea even that of the supremely blest;¹ since it is easy to wish. But now—since the thud of this double scourge² reacheth home—our cause hath already its champions beneath the earth, while the hands of the other side, though they have the mastery—those wretches—are hands unholy. 'Tis the children that have gained the day!

ORESTES

¹ The Hyperboreans, a fabulous people dwelling "beyond the North wind," were imagined to live longer and in greater felicity than other mortals.

² The "thud of the double scourge" refers to the appeal to the dead, lashing him to vengeance, to the beating of the head and breast, and to the stamping on the ground, which, like the invocation of the dead, were intended to arouse the nether powers. The scourge is "double" (cp. Agam. 647) because the participants in the scene are the two children (l. 334) and the Chorus.

THE LIBATION-BEARERS

clenched blows rained thick and fast one might have seen my outstretched hands, now on this side now on that, descending from above—from far above—till my battered and wretched head resounded with the strokes.

ELECTRA

Out upon thee, cruel, all-daring mother! In cruel burial, a king unattended by his people, unattended by lamentation, thou didst find the heart to bury thy husband unbewailed.

ORESTES

Ah me, thy words spell utter dishonour. Yet by God's help, and by help of mine own hands, shall she not make atonement for the dishonour done my sire? Let me but take her life, then let me die!

CHORUS

Aye, and he was foully mangled,¹ I would have thee know. And even as she thus buried him, she wrought with the design to make the manner of his murder a burthen on thy life, past all power to bear. Thou hearest the story of the ignominious outrage done to thy father.

¹ An allusion to the savage custom by which the extremities of the murdered man were cut off, then hung about his neck and tied together under the arm-pits (μασχάλαι). At least one object of this "arm-pitting" was to disable the spirit of the dead from taking vengeance on the murderer.

ELECTRA

My father was murdered even as thou tellest. But I, the while, despised, accounted as a thing of naught, was kept aloof; kennelled, as I had been a vicious cur, in my chamber, I gave free vent to my streaming tears—that came more readily than laughter—as in my concealment I poured forth my lament in plenteous weeping. Hear my tale and grave it on thy heart.

CHORUS

Aye, let it sink deep into thine ears, but keep withal a quiet steadfastness of soul. Thus far the case stands thus; but what's to follow do thou of thyself be eager to resolve. Thou must enter the lists with wrath inflexible.

ORESTES

Father, on thee I call; side with thine own!

And I, all tears, join my voice to his.

O ye gods, decide aright the plea of right !

CHORUS

A shudder steals o'er me as I hear these prayers.
Doom hath long been waiting, but, in answer to them that pray, come it will.

Ah, trouble inbred in the race and bloody stroke of Ruin grating harsh discord ! Ah, sorrows lamentable and grievous ! Ah, the staunchless pain !

The house hath a cure to heal these woes—a cure not from without, from others' hand—but from itself, by savage strife of blood. To the gods beneath the earth this hymn is sung.

O ye blest powers below, give ear to this our supplication, and of your ready will send forth to the children your succour unto victory !

ORESTES

O father, who perished by an unroyal death,

Have compassion on thy offspring, on the woman and at the same time on the male, and let not this seed of Pelops' line be blotted out ; for then, in spite of death, thou art not dead. For children are voices of salvation to a man, though he be dead ; like corks, they buoy up the net, saving the flaxen cord from out the deep. Hearken ! For thine own sake we make this plaint. It shall be so. But it is in no wise amiss to enquire how, from what motive, she came to send libations, seeking too late to make requital for a deed past remedy. To the unconscious dead they were a sorry boon to send; their import I cannot guess. The gifts are too paltry for the offence. For, though a man pour out his all in atonement for one deed of blood, it is labour lost; so runs the saw. If indeed thou knowest, resolve me; I am fain to learn.

But if once I shall pass the outermost threshold of the gate and shall find that man sitting on my father's throne, or if thereafter coming face to face with me he shall—mark well!—lift and cast down his eyes ere ever he can say "Of what land is the stranger?" with my swift sword I'll spit him and lay him dead. The Avenging Spirit that hath no stint of gore shall for her third and crowning draught quaff blood unmixed!

Now do thou, Electra, keep strict watch of what passes within the house, that so our plans may fit together well. winged things and things that walk the earth can also tell of the stormy wrath of whirlwinds.

But of man's spirit overbold who can tell and of the reckless passions of women hardened of soul, comrades with the woes of mortals? Inordinate passion, overmastering the female, gains fatal victory over the wedded unions of brutes and men alike.

If any there be who is not light-minded in his understanding, let him know this, when he hath learned of the device of a lighted brand, planned by Thestius' heartless daughter,¹ who wrought the ruin of her own child, when that she consumed the charred brand, which was to be like-aged with him from the hour when he came forth from his mother's womb and cried aloud, and which kept pace with him throughout his life unto the day foredoomed of fate.

And there is in legend another dame,² meet theme for abomination, a maiden of blood, who wrought destruction on one dear to her at the bidding of his foes, when, lured by Minos' gift, the

² Nisus was besieged in his town of Megara by Minos, king of Crete. Nisus' daughter Scylla, being in love with Minos, cut from the head of her father the purple hair on which his life depended, so that he was slain by the Cretans.

Cretan necklace forged of 'gold, she reft Nisus of his immortal hair, as he drew his breath in unsuspecting sleep—dog-hearted that she was. And him Hermes¹ overtook.

But since I have called to mind tales of pitiless afflictions, 'tis the fitting time to tell of a marriage void of love, an abomination to the house, and the plots devised by a wife's cunning against her warrior lord, against her lord with reason by his foes revered. But I hold in honour a hearth and home stranger to passion's fires and in woman a spirit that shrinks from audacious deeds.

Of crimes indeed the Lemnian² holdeth first place in story; long hath it been told with groans as a calamity abominable: each new horror men liken to Lemnian troubles; and by reason of that woeful deed, abhorred of the gods, the race hath disappeared, cast out in infamy from among mankind. For no man holdeth in reverence that which merits Heaven's hate. Is there one of these gathered tales that I do not justly cite?

But the keen and bitter sword is nigh the breast and driveth home its blow at the bidding of Justice. For verily the unrighteousness of him who hath un-

ORESTES

Announce me to the masters of the house ; for it is even to them I come as bearer of tidings. Strangers, ye have only to declare your need ; for we have all that befits this house—warm baths, beds to charm away fatigue, and the presence of honest eyes. But if, apart from this, there is matter requiring graver counsel, that is the concern of men, and with them we will communicate.

ORESTES

I am a stranger, a Daulian of the Phocians. As I was on my way, carrying my pack, on business of my own, to Argos—even as I have ended here my journey¹—a man, a stranger to me as I to him, fell in with me, and enquired my way and told me his, Strophius, a Phocian (for as we talked I learned his name) and said to me, “ Since, in any case, stranger, thou art bound for Argos, bear in mind my message most sacredly and say to his parents ‘ Orestes is dead ’—and let it no wise escape thee. Whether his friends decide to bring him home or to bury him in the land of his sojourn, an alien utterly for evermore, convey their bidding back to me. Meantime a bronze urn encloses the ashes of a man bewept right well.” Thus much I tell thee as

I heard it. Whether by any chance I speak to those with whom the question rests and whose concern it is, I know not; but his parent should know the fact.

CLYTAEMESTRA

Ah me! Thy tales pells our utter undoing. O Curse that hauntest this house—so hard to wrestle down—how far thy vision reaches! Even what was well bestowed out of harm's way, thou bringest down with thy well-aimed shafts from afar, and strippest me of those I love, all unhappy that I am. And now Orestes—for well counselling was he in keeping his foot out of the slough of destruction; but now, the hope that once was within the house to medicine its fair revelry—do thou record it as abandoning us.¹

ORESTES

For myself, I am sure, with hosts so prosperous. I had rather been made known and welcomed by reason of good tidings. For where is good-will greater than from guest to host? Yet to my thought it had been a breach of sacred duty not to fulfil for friends a charge like this when I was bound by promise and by hospitality pledged to me.

CLYTAEMESTRA

Nay, rest assured, thou shalt receive no less that there has been an end of the carousing of the Curses (cp. Agam. 1188). That hope is gone—they still hold their "fair revelry," as she ironically calls it. Her inner emotion is joy that the hope of Electra is crushed—the hope that her brother would return and end the unseemly revelry. Reading παροῦσαν (so M) ἐγγράφη the meaning is "thou dost inscribe it 'present' in thy list."

I charge thee do this as thou shalt be held to strict account. Meantime we will impart this matter to the master of the house, and—since we are in no lack of friends—will take counsel touching this event. [All withdraw except the Chorus]

CHORUS

Ah, loyal handmaidens of the house, how long shall it be before we show forth what power lies in our lips to do Orestes service?

O hallowed earth, and hallowed high-raised barrow that liest now upon the royal form of the commander of the fleet, now hearken, now lend me aid! Now is the hour for Persuasion with her guile to enter the lists with him, and for Hermes of the nether world—even he that worketh in stealth—to direct this encounter of the deadly sword. [Enter Orestes' Nurse]

Our stranger, methinks, is working mischief; for yonder I see Orestes' nurse all in tears. Cilissa¹! whither away? How comes it that thou art thus setting foot in the palace-gate, with grief for thy unhired companion?

NURSE

My mistress bids me summon Aegisthus for the strangers with all speed, that he may come and learn more clearly, as man from man, these tidings that have just arrived. Before the servants, indeed, behind eyes that made sham gloom she hid her laughter over what hath befallen happily for her—but for this house, the news so plainly told by the strangers spells utter ruin. He, I warrant, on hearing it, will rejoice in heart when he hears the story. Miserable woman that I am! How the old troubles of every sort, so hard to bear, that befell in this house of Atreus, have ever made my heart to ache within my breast! But never yet have I endured a blow like this; for all the other troubles I bore patiently; but my beloved Orestes, on whom I spent my soul, whom I took from his mother at his birth and nursed, and the many and troublesome tasks—fruitless for all my enduring them—when his loud and urgent cries broke my rest. For the senseless thing one must nurse like a dumb beast—of course one must—by following its humour. For while it is still a babe in swaddling clothes, it has no speech at all—whether it be that hunger moves it, or thirst belike, or call of need—children's young inwards work their own relief. These needs I would forecast; yet many a time, I trow, mistaken, having to wash the child's linen—laundress and nurse had the same office. 'Twas I who, with these two handierasts, received Orestes at his father's hands. And now, unhappy that I am, I hear that

THE LIBATION-BEARERS

Bethink thee that the orphaned colt of one dear unto thee is harnessed to the chariot of distress. And do thou, setting bounds to his running, grant that we may see him keeping a steady pace over this course, in the straining stride of a gallop winning to the goal! ¹

And ye who within the house inhabit the inner chamber that exulteth in its wealth, hear me, ye gods, that feel with us! By fresh award redeem the blood of deeds done of old. May aged Murder cease to beget offspring in the house!

And thou, that tenanted the mighty, fair-built cavern,² grant that the house of the man may lift up its eyes again in joy, and that with glad eyes from out its veil of gloom it may behold freedom's radiant light!

May Maia's son,³ as rightfully he ought, lend aid, for none can better waft a deed on a favouring course, when so he will; ⁴ but by his mysterious utterance he bringeth darkness o'er men's eyes by night, and by day he is no whit clearer.

¹ That is, let him bide his time by guarding against haste.

And then at last with loud voice shall we sing the song of the deliverance of the house, the song that women raise when the wind sits fair, and not the shrill strain of them that mourn—"For the State this is well. To me, to me, this increaseth unto gain, and calamity holdeth aloof from those I love."

But do thou, with good courage, when the part of action comes, cry aloud the name "Father" when she exclaims "Son," and despatch the baneful but offenceless deed.

Uplift Perseus' spirit within thy breast, and for those dear to thee below the earth, and for those above, exacting the satisfaction of dire wrath, work bloody ruin within the house and utterly destroy the guilty cause of death.

ÆGISTHUS

I have come not unasked but summoned by a messenger. 'Tis startling tidings that, as I hear, are told by certain strangers who have come, tidings far from welcome—that Orestes is dead. [The Chorus withdraws to the side of the scene; thereupon a servant of Aegisthus rushes in

SERVANT

Woe's me, oh utter woe! My master's slain! Woe's me! yet again, for the third time, I cry. Aegisthus is no more! Come, open with all speed! Unbar the women's door! And a right strong arm it needs—but not to help him who's already slain—what good in that? Ho! ho! Am I shouting to the deaf and wasting my voice in vain on folk asleep? Where's Clytaemestra gone? What is she doing? Her own neck, nigh the razor's edge, is now like to fall, and rightly, beneath the stroke.

fold downfall. Yet, since sore-tried Orestes hath mounted the crest of many deeds of blood, we would rather have it thus—that the eye of the house should not perish utterly.

As unto Priam and his sons justice came at last in crushing retribution, so unto Agamemnon's house came a twofold lion, twofold slaughter.¹ Unto the uttermost hath the exile, the suppliant of Pytho's god, fulfilled his course, urged justly on by counsels from above.

Oh raise a shout of triumph over the escape of our master's house from its misery and the wasting of its wealth by a polluted pair, even from a toilsome fate!

And he hath come whose part is the crafty vengeance of stealthy attack; and in the battle his hand was guided by her who is in very truth daughter of Zeus, breathing wrath to the death upon her foes. Justice we mortals call her name, hitting well the mark.²

of Parnassus' mighty cavern shrine, with guileless guile assail the mischief that has become inveterate. May the word of God prevail that so I serve not the wicked! ¹ It is right to reverence the rule of Heaven.

Lo, the light hath come, and I am freed from the cruel curb that restrained the household. Arise, ye halls! Too long a while have ye lain prostrate on the ground.

But soon shall all-accomplishing Time pass the portals of the house when from the hearth all pollution shall be driven by cleansing rites that drive out calamity. The dice of fortune shall change as they fall and lie with faces full fair to behold, well-disposed to those who sojourn in the house.

Lo, the light hath come, and I am freed from the cruel curb that restrained the household. Arise ye halls! Too long a while have ye lain prostrate on the ground.

they were once what time they sat upon their thrones, and loving even now, as one may judge by what hath befallen them; and their oath holds true to their pledges. Together they swore a league of death against my unhappy father, and together they swore to die; and well have they kept their oath.

But now again behold, ye who hearken to this disastrous cause, the device for binding fast my unhappy father, wherewith his hands were manacled, his feet were fettered. Spread it out! Stand round in a throng, and display it—a covering for a man!—that the Father (not mine, but he that surveyeth all things in this world, the Sun) may behold the impious work of my own mother; and so in the day of judgment may be present as my witness that with just cause I pursued this death, even my mother's; for of Aegisthus' death I speak not; for he hath suffered the adulterer's punishment as the law allows.

But she who devised this abhorrent deed against her husband, whose children she had conceived, a burthen beneath her zone, a burthen sometime dear, but now, as the event shows, of deadly hate—what thinkest thou of her? Had she been born sea-snake or viper, methinks her very touch without her bite had made some other to rot, if shamelessness and wickedness of spirit could do it.

But while I still retain reason, I proclaim to those who hold me dear and declare that not without justice did I slay my mother, polluted murderess of my father, and a thing loathed of Heaven.

And as for the promptings that gave me courage for this deed, I offer as my chiefest surety Loxias, Pytho's prophet, who declared that, if I did this deed, I should stand clear of evil charge, but if I forebore—I will not name the penalty; for no bow-shot could reach such height of woe.

And now behold me, how, armed with this branch and wreath, I go as suppliant to earth's central seat, Loxias' demesne, and to the bright fire famed "imperishable,"¹ an exile for this deed of kindred bloodshed; to no other hearth did Loxias bid me turn. And as to the manner how this evil deed was wrought, I charge all men of Argos in time to come to bear me witness. SCENE.—(1) The temple of Apollo at Delphi ;

(2) Athena's temple at Athens.

TIME.—The heroic age.

DATE.—458 B.C., at the City Dionysia.

ARGUMENT

THE priestess of Apollo discovers Orestes as a suppliant in the inner shrine of the god at Delphi, and fronting him the Erinyes of his mother, a band of fearsome creatures who, wearied with the pursuit of the fugitive, have fallen on sleep. Under promise of his support, Apollo bids Orestes flee to Athens, where he shall submit his case to judgment and be released from his sufferings. The ghost of Clytaemestra rises to upbraid the sleeping Erinyes because of their neglect, whereby she is dishonoured among the other dead. Awakened by her taunts, they revile Apollo for that he has given sanctuary to a polluted man whom they rightly pursue by reason of their office—to take vengeance on all who shed kindred blood.

The scene shifts to Athens, whither his pursuers have tracked their prey. Orestes, clasping the ancient image of Pallas, implores her protection on the plea that the blood upon his hands has long since been washed away by sacred rites and that his presence has worked harm to none who have given him shelter. The Erinyes chant a hymn to bind the soul of their victim with its maddening spell. In answer to Orestes' call, the goddess appears and with the consent of the Erinyes undertakes to judge the case, not by herself alone but with the assistance of a chosen number of her best citizens who are to constitute the jury.

EUMENIDES

The trial opens with Apollo present as advocate of his suppliant and as representative of Zeus, whose commands he has merely to set forth in all his oracles. Orestes, he declares, slew his mother by his express behest. The accused confesses to the deed but urges in his defence that in killing her husband Clytaemestra killed his father and that his accusers should justly have taken vengeance upon her. On their rejecting this argument on the ground that the murderess was not blood-kin to him she murdered, Orestes denies blood-kinship with his mother ; in which contention he is supported by Apollo, who asserts that the father alone is the proper parent of the child, the mother being only the nurse of the implanted seed.

Athena announces that the court, the first to try a case of homicide, is now established by her for all time to come. The jury cast their ballots ; and the goddess, declaring that it is her duty to pronounce final judgment on the case, makes known that her vote is to count for Orestes, who is to win if the ballots are equally divided. Proclaimed victor by the tie, Orestes quits the scene ; his antagonists threaten to bring ruin on the land that has denied the justice of their cause. It is the part of Athena by promises of enduring honours to assuage their anger ; and now no longer Spirits of Wrath but Spirits of Blessing, they are escorted in solemn procession to their sanctuary beneath the Hill of Ares.

PROPHETESS

First, in this my prayer, I give the place of chiefest honour among the gods to the first prophet, Earth ; and after her to Themis ; for she, as is told, took second this oracular seat of her mother. And third in succession, with Themis' consent and by constraint of none, another Titan, Phoebé, child of Earth, took here her seat. She bestowed it, as birth-gift, upon Phoebus, who has his name from Phoebé. He, quitting the mere¹ and ridge of Delos, landed on Pallas' ship-frequented shores, and came to this region and the dwelling places on Parnassus. With mighty reverence was he given escort by Hephaestus' children,² who fashion high-ways, taming the wildness of the untamed land. And on his coming, high worship was paid him by the folk and by Delphus, helmsman and sovereign of this land. With the prophet's art Zeus inspired his soul, and stablished him upon this throne as fourth and present seer ; but it is of Zeus, his sire, that Loxias is spokesman.

These are the gods I place in the forefront of my

For as the god doth lead, so do I prophesy.

Horrible! Horrors to relate, horrors for my eyes to behold, have sent me back from the house of Loxias; so that I have no strength left in me nor can I go upright. I run with the aid of my hands, not with any nimbleness of limb; for an aged woman, overcome with fright, is a thing of naught—nay rather, she is but as a child.

I was on my way to the inner shrine, enriched with many a wreath, when, on the centre-stone,³ I beheld a man defiled before Heaven occupying the seat of suppliants. His hands were dripping gore; he held a sword just drawn and a lofty olive-branch reverently crowned with a tuft of wool exceeding large—white was the fleece ; for as to this I can speak clearly.

Before this man there sat asleep on thrones a wondrous throng of women. No! women they were surely not, Gorgons I rather call them. Nor yet can I liken them to forms of Gorgons either. Once ere this I saw some pictured creatures¹ carrying off the feast of Phineus—but these are wingless, sable, and altogether detestable. Their snorting nostrils blow forth fearsome blasts, and from their eyes oozes a loathly rheum. Their garb, too, was such as is unfit to bring before the statues of the gods or into the abodes of men. The tribe which owns this company I have never seen ; nor do I know what region boasts to rear unscathed this brood and not repent its pains.

But for the outcome, let that be now the care of the lord of this house, even Loxias himself, the puissant, for he is a revealer of healing remedies, a reader of portents, and for others he purgeth their habitations.

fallen on sleep are these loathsome maidens—beldames, aged children, with whom nor any god nor man nor beast consorteth ever. For evil's sake were they even born, since they inhabit the evil gloom of Tartarus beneath the earth—creatures loathed of men and of Olympian gods. Nevertheless, do thou fly on and grow not faint of heart. For as thou ever tread'st the travelled earth, they will chase thee even over the wide continent and beyond the main and the cities girdled by the sea. And grow not weary ere thy course be run by brooding on this thy toil; but when thou art come to Pallas' burgh, sit thee down and clasp in thine arms her ancient image. And there, with judges of thy cause and speech of persuasive charm, we shall discover means to release thee utterly from thy distress; for it was at my behest that thou didst take thy mother's life.

GHOST OF CLYTAEMESTRA

Sleep on! Aha! Yet what need is there of sleepers? 'Tis due to you that I am thus dishonoured among the other dead; because of him I slew the dead never cease reviling me, and I wander in disgrace. I declare to you that they bring against me charge most grievous. And yet, howbeit I have endured such dire evils from my nearest kin, no power divine is wroth in my behalf, slaughtered as I have been by the hands of mine own son. Mark ye these gashes in my heart, whence they come! For the mind asleep hath clear vision, but in the daytime the fate of mortal men cannot be foreseen.

In sooth ye have lapped up full many an offering of mine—wineless libations, a sober appeasement, and banquets in the solemn night have I often sacrificed upon a hearth of fire at an hour unshared by any god. All this I see trampled under foot. But he has escaped away from you, and is gone, even as a fawn; aye, and has lightly bounded away from out the midmost of your snare, mocking at you with derisive leers. Hear me! Since I plead for my very life, awake to consciousness, ye goddesses of the nether world! 'Tis in a dream I, Clytaemestra, now invoke you.

"Tis mine to feel the cruel, the exceedingly cruel smart of the doomster's direful scourge.

Such are the doings of the younger gods, who rule, altogether beyond the right, a throne dripping blood, about its foot, about its head.

"Tis mine to see the centre-stone of the earth defiled with a terrible pollution of blood.

Seer though he is, at his own bidding, at his own urgency, he hath stained his sanctuary with pollution at its hearth; transgressing the ordinance of the gods, he hath held mortal things in honour and set at naught the apportionments of eld.

To me too he bringeth distress, but him he shall not deliver; though he fly beneath the earth, never is he set free. Stained with the guilt of murder, he shall get upon his head another avenger of his kin.¹

This is, in sooth, no house meet for your approach; no, your place is where there are sentences to beheading, gouging out of eyes, and cutting of throats; where, by destruction of the seed, the manhood of youth is ruined; where men are mutilated, stoned to death, and where, impaled beneath their spine, they make moaning long and piteous. D'ye hear what sort of feast ye love that makes you detestible to the gods? The whole fashion of your form doth set it forth. Creatures such as ye should inhabit the den of some blood-lapping lion, and not inflict pollution on all near you in this oracular shrine. Begone, ye herd without a shepherd! Such flock is loved by no one of the gods.

That would not be murder of the self-same blood and kin.

APOLLO

In good sooth thou heapest dishonour and contempt upon the pledges of Hera, the Fulfiller, and of Zeus.¹ Cypris too is cast aside dishonoured by this plea of thine, and from her mankind derive their nearest and their dearest joys. For marriage appointed by fate 'twixt man and woman is mightier than an oath and Justice is its guardian. If then, should one slay the other, thou art so lenient as not to punish or to visit them with wrath, then I pronounce thy pursuit of Orestes to have no justice in it. For the one cause, I perceive thou takest it sore to heart, whereas, in the other, thou art manifestly more remiss in act. But the goddess Pallas will review the pleadings in this case.

CHORUS

That man I will never, never quit !

APOLLO

Pursue him then and get thee more trouble for thyself.

CHORUS

Seek not to curtail my privileges by thy words.

¹ In connection with marriage, Hera was τελεια, as Zeus was τέλειος; and the adjective applies also to him here. The ancients derived τέλειος (of marriage) from τέλος meaning "rite," "consummation." Inasmuch as τέλος often has the sense "supreme authority," "full power," some modern scholars hold that Hera τελεια is Hera the Queen, Hera the Wife.

I would not take them as a gift, thy privileges.

APOLLO

And I will succour and rescue my suppliant! For appalling in heaven and on earth is the wrath of him who seeketh purification, should I of mine own intent abandon him. [Enters the Sanctuary

[The scene changes to Athens, before the temple of Athena. Enter Hermes with Orestes, who embraces the ancient image of the goddess

ORESTES

Queen Athena, at Loxias' bidding I am come; and do thou of thy grace receive an accursed wretch, no suppliant for purification, or uncleansed of hand, but with my guilt's edge already blunted and worn away at other habitations and in the travelled paths of men. Holding my course over land and sea alike, obedient to the behests of Loxias' oracle, I now approach thy house and thine image, O goddess. Here will I keep my post and abide the issue of my trial.

CHORUS

Aha! Here is the trail of the man, and plain! Follow the evidence of a voiceless informant. For as a hound a wounded fawn, so do we track him by the drops of blood. My heart pants at my sore and wearying toil; for I have ranged over every region of the earth, and in wingless flight I came in pursuit of him over the sea, swift as a swift ship. So now, somewhere hereabout he must be crouching. The smell of human blood makes me laugh for joy.

Look! Look again! Scan every spot lest unawares the slayer of his mother escape by secret flight and pay not his debt!

Aye, here he is again! In shelter, with arms twined round the image of the immortal goddess, he is fain to submit to trial for his debt!¹

But that may not be. A mother's blood upon the earth is past recovery; a lack, the flowing stream once spilled upon the ground is lost and gone!

Nay, thou art bound in requital to suffer that I suck the ruddy clouts of gore from thy living limbs. May I feed myself on thee—a gruesome draught!

I'll waste thy strength and hale thee living to the world below that thou mayest pay recompense for thy murdered mother's agony.

And thou shalt see whoever else of mankind hath sinned the sin of irreverence against god or stranger or his parents dear, having each his meed of justice.

For the Lord of Death is mighty in holding mortals to account beneath the earth; and he surveyeth all things with his recording mind.

ORESTES

Schooled by misery, I have knowledge of many ordinances of purification and I know where speech is proper and silence likewise; and in this present case hath speech been ordered me by a wise teacher. For the blood upon my hand is slumbering now and fading—the pollution wrought by my mother's slaying is washed away; for while yet fresh it was expelled at the hearth of a god, even Phoebus, by purification of slaughtered swine. It were a long tale to tell from the beginning of all I visited and harmed not by my dwelling with them. [Time in his ageing course weareth all things away.]

So now with pure lips I piously invoke Athena, this country's queen, to come to my aid. Without effort of her spear, shall she win myself, my land and the Argive folk as staunch and true allies for evermore. But whether in some region of the Libyan land, about the waters of Triton, her natal stream, she be in action or at rest,¹ aiding those

Nay, be sure, not Apollo nor Athena's might can save thee from perishing, spurned and neglected, knowing not where in thy soul is joy—a bloodless victim of the powers below, a shadow of thyself.

What ! Dost thou not even answer, but scornest my words, thou victim fatted and consecrate to me ? At no altar shalt thou be slain, but, living, shalt thou be my feast ; and thou shalt now hearken to our song to bind thee with its spell.

Come now, let us also link the dance, since we are resolved to display our drear minstrelsy and to declare our office, how our company directeth the affairs of men. Just and upright do we claim to be. Whoso holdeth out hands undefiled, no wrath from us assaileth him, and unscathed he passeth all his days ; but whoso committeth sin like unto this man, and hideth his blood-stained hands, as upright witnesses for the slain hard by at hand are we, and as avengers of bloodshed do we appear against him to the end.

O mother Night, mother who didst bear me to be a retribution unto the dead and the living, hearken unto me ! For Leto's son would bring me to dishonour by wresting from my grasp yon cowering wretch, fit offering to expiate a mother's blood.

O'er our victim consecrate, this is our song—fraught with madness, fraught with frenzy, crazing the brain, the Furies' hymn, spell to bind the soul, untuned to the lyre, withering the life of mortal man.

For this is the office that ever-determining Fate, when it span the thread of our life, assigned unto us to hold unalterably : that upon those of mortals on whom have come wanton murdering of kinsfolk, upon them we should attend until such time as they pass beneath the earth ; and after death they have no large liberty.

O'er our victim consecrate, this is our song—fraught with madness, fraught with frenzy, crazing the brain, the Furies' hymn, spell to bind the soul, untuned to the lyre, withering the life of mortal man.

But, as he falleth, he knoweth it not by reason of his insensate folly. In so dark a cloud doth pollution hover over the man; and rumour, fraught with many a woe, proclaimeth that a mist-like gloom hangeth over against his house.

For assuredly with a mighty leap from aloft do I bring down the heavy-falling force of my foot, limbs that trip even swift runners—downfall unendurable.

For it abideth. Ready of device are we, and we bring to fulfilment, mindful of evil wrought, awful and inexorable to mankind, pursuing our appointed office dishonoured, despised, separated from the gods by a light not of the sun—an office that maketh rough the path of the living and the dead alike.

Who then of mortal men doth not hold this in holy awe and dread, when he heareth from my lips the ordinance ratified unto me by Fate under grant made by the gods for its perfect fulfilment? From afar I heard the call of a summons, even from the Scamander, the while I was taking possession of the land, which the leaders and chieftains of the Achaeans assuredly assigned to me, as a goodly portion of the spoil their spears had won, to be mine utterly and for ever, a choice gift unto 'Theseus' sons.¹ Thence have I come, speeding onward my unwearied foot, whirring, instead of wings, the folds of my aegis.² As I behold this unfamiliar concourse of visitants to my land, fear indeed I feel not but astonishment is upon my eyes. Who in the world be ye? I address you all in common—both you stranger kneeling at mine image, and you, who are like to no race of creatures born, neither among goddesses seen of gods, nor yet having resemblance to shapes of human kind. But to speak ill of one's neighbour who is innocent of offence, is far from just, and Right standeth aloof therefrom.

CHORUS

Daughter of Zeus, thou shalt hear all in brief. We are Night's dread children. "Curses" are we named in our habitations beneath the earth.

ATHENA

And where is the bourne of the slayer in his flight ?

CHORUS

Where joy is absent and unknown.¹

ATHENA

Would'st thou indeed hound him with thy screeching to such flight ?

Aye, for he held it his duty to be his mother's murderer.

ATHENA

Because of other constraint or through fear of someone's wrath ?

CHORUS

Where is there a spur so keen as to compel to murder of a mother ?

and thy fortunes ; thereafter, defend thee against this charge—if indeed it so be that, in reliance on the justice of thy cause, thou art seated here, clinging to mine image hard by my hearth, a sacred suppliant after the fashion of Ixion.¹ To all this make me some plain answer.

ORESTES

Queen Athena, first of all I will remove a great misgiving that lies hidden in thy last utterance. A suppliant in need of purification I am not ; nor with pollution on my hands did I fall at the feet of thine image. And of this I will offer thee weighty proof. It is the law that he who is defiled by shedding blood shall be debarred all speech until the blood of a suckling victim shall have besprinkled him by the ministrations of one empowered to purify from murder. Long since, at other houses, have I been thus purified both by victims and by flowing streams.

This cause for thy anxiety I thus dispel. As to my lineage, thou shalt hear forthwith. I am an Argive ; my father—and fittingly dost thou make inquiry concerning him—was Agamemnon, he who marshalled the sea-host, in concert with whom thou madest Ilium, city of Troyland, to be no more a city. Upon his returning home, he perished by no honourable death ; nay, he was slain by my black-hearted mother, who enfolded him in a crafty snare that still remains to witness his murder in the bath. And I, when that I came back home—an exile I had been beforetime—I slew her that gave me birth —disavow it I will not—in vengeance to requite the murder of my sire I most dearly loved. And for this deed Loxias, in common with me, is answerable, who, to spur my purpose, threatened me with cruel woes should I fail to do this deed upon the guilty. Whether my deed was wrought in righteousness or not, do thou pronounce judgment; for howsoever I fare at thy ruling, I shall rest content.

ATHENA

The affair is too grave, if any mortal thinks to pass judgment thereon; nay, it is not lawful even for me to decide on cases of murder which involves swift wrath; above all since thou, by rites fully performed, hast come a suppliant purified and harmless to my house; and so I have respect unto thee as void of offence to my city. Yet these women have an office that does not permit them lightly to be dismissed; and if they fail to gain the victory in their cause, the venom from their resentment will fall upon the ground and become hereafter an intolerable and perpetual pestilence to afflict the land.

So then stands the case: either course—to suffer them to stay, to drive them forth—is fraught with disaster and perplexity to me. But since this cause hath devolved on me, I will appoint judges of homicide bound by oath and stablish a tribunal, a tribunal to endure for all time. Do ye call your witnesses and adduce your proofs, sworn evidence to support your cause; and I will return when I have singled out the best of my burghers, that

Now is the end of all things wrought by new ordinances, if the wrongful cause of this slayer of his mother is to triumph. Straightway will his deed reconcile all men to licence; and many woeful wounds, dealt in very truth by children, are in store for parents in time yet to come.

For from us, the Furious Ones that keep watch upon mortals, shall no wrath for such misdeeds draw nigh—I will let loose death in every form. And as he anticipates his neighbour's evil plight, one man shall ask of another when tribulation is to end or to decrease; and the poor wretch offereth the vain consolation of remedies that bring no certain cure.

Nor let anyone henceforth, when he hath been smitten by calamity, make appeal and cry aloud "O Justice!" "O enthroned Spirits of Vengeance!" Peradventure some father, or mother, newly stricken, may thus make piteous lament, now that the house of Justice is falling.

Times there are when fear is well and should abide enthroned as guardian of the heart. It profiteth to learn wisdom with groaning. But who that traineth not his heart in fear, be it State or be it man, is like in the future to reverence justice as heretofore ?

Approve thou not a life ungoverned nor one subjected to a tyrant's sway. To moderation in every form God giveth the victory, but his other dispensations he directeth in varying wise. I give utterance to a timely truth : arrogance is in very sooth the child of impiety ; but from health of soul cometh happiness, dear unto all and oft besought in prayer.

And as for the whole matter I say unto thee : reverence the altar of Righteousness, and spurn it not to dishonour with godless foot because thine eyes look to worldly profit ; for punishment will come upon thee. The appointed issue abideth. Wherefore let a man duly put in front place of honour the piety he oweth to his parents, and have

Do thou now, Apollo, give thy testimony; and, I pray thee, expound the law, whether I was justified in slaying her. For to have done the deed, as done it is, I deny it not. But whether this deed of blood seemeth to thy understanding to have been wrought in righteousness or in unrighteousness, do thou decide that I may inform the court.

APOLLO

Unto you, this high tribunal created by Athena, I will speak as justice bids,—seer that I am, I cannot utter untruth. Never yet, on my oracular throne, have I spoken aught touching man or woman or commonwealth, but what hath been commanded by Zeus, the father of the Olympians.

Mark how potent is this plea of justice; and I charge you to yield obedience to the Father's will; for an oath hath not greater authority than Zeus.¹

CHORUS

Zeus—on thy saying—gave thee this oracular command: to declare to Orestes here that he avenge the slaying of his father, but of the honour due his mother take no account at all?

APOLLO

Aye, for it was in no wise the same thing—the murder of a high-born man, invested with the sceptre of god-given sway, and murder wrought, too, by a woman's hand, not with gallant weapons, arrows sped from afar, it might be, by an Amazon, but in the manner as thou shalt hear, Pallas, and ye who here hold session to decide by vote upon this present cause.

On his returning from the war, wherein, in the judgment of his well-affected subjects, he had for the most part won success beyond expectation,¹ she gave him welcome; then, as he was stepping from the bath, on its very edge, she curtained the laver with a tented cloak, enveloped her husband in a brodered robe's inextricable maze, and hewed him down.

Such was the manner of his taking off, as I have told it you—a hero, all-majestic, commander of the fleet. As for that woman, I have described her thus to whet the indignation of the folk to whom it hath been appointed to decide this cause.

CHORUS

A father's death, according to thy plea, is held by Zeus as of more account; yet he himself cast into bonds his aged father Cronus. How does not this act belie thy argument? I call upon you (turning to the judges) to give heed to this.

APOLLO

Oh, monsters utterly loathed and detested of the gods! Bonds Zeus might undo; from them

For this my Father hath provided no remedial spells, though all things else he reverseth and disposeth at his will; nor doth his exercise of might cost him a breath.

CHORUS

Mark now the meaning of thy plea for his acquittal! Shall he who has spilled upon the ground his mother's kindred blood, shall he thereafter inhabit his father's house in Argos? To what altars of common worship shall he have access? What brotherhood¹ will admit him to its lustral rite?

APOLLO

This, too, I will set forth, and mark how rightful shall be my answer. The mother of what is called her child is not its parent, but only the nurse of the newly implanted germ.² The begetter is the parent, whereas she, as a stranger for a stranger, doth but preserve the sprout, except God shall blight its birth. And I will offer thee a sure proof of what I say: fatherhood there may be, when mother there is none. Here at hand is a witness, the child of Olympian Zeus—and not so much as whose source was Hecataeus, an older contemporary of Aeschylus) and in various Greek authors later than Aeschylus, e.g. Euripides, Orestes 552, Frag. 1064, the Pythagoreans cited by Stobaeus (Hense ii. 72). The passage in the play has been invoked as evidence that the Athenians of the fifth century B.C. were upholding, some the ancient mode of tracing descent from the mother (the argument of the Erinyes); others, the patrilinear theory advocated by Apollo.

bloodshed. Heneeforth, even as now, this court of judges shall abide unto the people of Aegeus for evermore. And this Hill of Ares, whereon the Amazons had their seat and pitched their tents, what time they came, embattled, in resentment against Theseus, and in those days built up this new citadel with lofty towers to rival his, and sacrificed to Ares ; whence the roek takes its name from him, even the Hill of Ares¹—upon this hill, I say, Reverenee, indwelling in my burghers, and her kinsman Fear, shall withhold them from doing wrong by day and night alike, so be it they do not themselves pollute the laws with evil influences ; stain clear water with mud and thou shalt never find sweet drink.

Neither anarchy nor tyranny—this I counsel my burghers to maintain and hold in reverence, nor quite to banish fear from out the city. For who among mortal men is righteous that hath no fear of aught ? Stand then in just awe of such majesty and ye shall possess a bulwark to safeguard your country and your government, such as none of mankind hath either among the Scythians or in Pelops' realm. This tribunal I do now establish, inviolable by lust of gain, august, quick to avenge, a guardian of the land, vigilant in defence of them that sleep.

I have thus dwelt at length in exhortation to my people for time yet to be ; but ye must needs now because he had carried off Antiope, their queen : or because he did not enclose the hill within the confines of his newly-founded city, which included the Acropolis. Aeschylus apparently rejects the legend whereby the Hill of Ares had its name from the fact that Ares was here tried for the murder of Halirrothius, a son of Poseidon, and acquitted by a tie vote of the gods, his judges.

An ancient story, adopted by Aeschylus, reported that, when the time came for Admetus to die, Apollo, in gratitude for the kindness shown him by the prince, plied the Fates with wine (l. 728) and thus secured their consent that Admetus should be released from death on condition that some one should voluntarily choose to die in his stead, Euripides, in his Alcestis, tells how, when both the father and the mother of Admetus refused to give up to him the remnant of their days, his wife Alcestis died for him.

And from it a canker, blasting leaf, blasting child (ah! just return!), speeding over the land shall cast upon the ground infection ruinous to human kind. I groan aloud. What shall I do? I am mocked by the people. Intolerable are the wrongs I have suffered. Ah, cruel indeed the wrongs of the woeful daughters of Night, bereft of honour and distressed!

ATHENA

Let me prevail with you not to bear it with sore lament. For ye have not been vanquished. Nay, the trial resulted fairly in ballots equally divided without disgrace to thee; but from Zeus was offered testimony clear, and he that himself uttered the oracle himself bare witness that Orestes should not suffer harm for his deed. And be ye no longer indignant, launch not your grievous wrath upon this land, nor visit it with unfruitfulness by discharging drops whose wasting influence will devour the seed. For I do promise you most sacredly that ye shall occupy a cavernous seat in a righteous land, ¹ To avoid the collision of metaphors, Abresch assumed the loss of a line in which some qualification of Orestes would have been named as object of the second verb. Verrall thought the object was designedly omitted to indicate the passion of the Erinyes.

Bereft of honour ye are not; wherefore, god-blight past all cure a land of mortal men. I, too, rely on Zeus—what need to speak of that?—and know, I alone of the gods, the keys of the armoury

But as for you, if ye depart to a land inhabited of other tribes of men, ye shall come to love this land—I forewarn you that. For time, in his on-flowing course, shall bring yet greater honours to this my people. And thou, enthroned in dignity nigh unto Erechtheus' house, shalt obtain, from trains of men and women, more honours than thou could'st ever win from all the world beside. Upon this realm, burghers. If kindly, even as they are kindly, ye pay them high worship evermore, ye shall surely be pre-eminent, guiding your land and your city in the straight path of righteousness.

CHORUS

Fare ye well, fare ye well, amid the wealth vouchsafed by fate. Fare ye well, ye folk of the city, ye that are seated nigh unto Zeus, ye beloved of the beloved Maiden, learning at last the way of wisdom. Nestling beneath the wings of Pallas, the Father holdeth ye in reverence.

ATHENA

Fare ye well likewise. But I needs must lead the way to point out your dwellings by the sacred light of these, your escorts.¹ Do ye now depart, and sped beneath the earth with these solemn sacrifices, restrain whate'er is to our country's bane, but whate'er may profit her, send forth to win her victory! Ye children of Cranaüs² that hold this city, lead on their way these new dwellers therein. And may the citizens cherish good will in requital for the good done unto them!

¹ The Chorus are now to be solemnly conducted to the cave beneath the Hill of Ares, the seat of the worship of the Venerable Ones (Σεμναί, l. 1041), with whom the poet here identifies the Erinyes, the Angry Ones, the Avenging Spirits. The identification seems also to include the Eumenides, the Kindly Ones, who were worshipped at Sicyon, at Argos, and in Attica at Phlya and Colonus (see Sophocles' Oedipus Coloneus). The procession is formed by Athena (at its head), the Chorus, the Arcopagites, torch-bearers, the women who guard the Palladium, and various others. In the rear came the Athenian public.

² Cranaüs was the mythical founder of the "rocky city" (κραναῖος "rocky"), a favourite name of Athens.

FRAGMENTS

SELECTED FRAGMENTS

THIS selection includes those fragments of which at least one entire verse, or two connected half-verses, is preserved. The numbers in parentheses, unless otherwise designated, are those of the second edition of Nauck's Tragicorum Graecorum fragmenta (1889). Fragments not included in Nauck's collection are numbered according to the arrangement adopted in "Unlisted Fragments of Aeschylus," American Journal of Philology, xli. (1920) 101-114. Unidentified fragments assigned to Aeschylus by modern scholars are indicated either by "Anon.," followed by the numbers of Nauck's Ἀδέσποτα, or by the numbers of Wecklein's edition, or by both.

THE PLAYS OF AESCHYLUS

Seventy-three of the under-mentioned titles appear in the list of the dramas that is found in the Medicean manuscript.

Satyric plays attested: Κερκυών, Κήρυκες, Κίρκη, Λέων, Λυκουργός, Προμηθεὺς (πυρκαεὺς), Πρωτεύς, Σφίγξ. Possibly satyric are: Ἀμυμώνη, Γλαῦκος πόντιος, Καλλιστώ, Κάβειροι, Ξάντριάι, Σίσυφος δραπέτης, Φορκίδες.

Tetralogies attested:

1. (472 B.C.) Φινεύς, Πέρσαι, Γλαῦκος (Ποτνιεύς), Προμηθεὺς (πυρκαεὺς).
2. (467 B.C.) Λαῖος, Οἰδίπους, Ἐπτά ἐπὶ Θηβας, Σφίγξ.

² No identified fragment is extant. Φρύγιοι is probably the same play as Φρύγες.

³ No identified fragment forming an entire verse is extant.

⁴ The two plays are not to be distinguished in the extant fragments.

FRAGMENTS

By reason of the myth or of other indication of connexion between their several members, the following groups may be assumed with some probability. (The order within the group is often uncertain.)

Ἰκέτιδες, Αἰγύπτιοι, Δαναΐδες, Ἀμυμώνη (satyric).

Ψυχαγωγοί, Ὄστολόγοι, Πηνελόπη, Κίρκη (satyric).

Προμηθεὺς δεσμώτης, Προμηθεὺς λυόμενος, Προμηθεὺς πурφόρος.

Ὀπλων κρίσις, Θρηῆσαι, Σαλαμίνιαι.

Μυρμιδόνες, Νηρεΐδες, Φρύγες ἢ Ἐκτορος λύτρα.

Ἀργώ, Λήμνιοι (Λήμνιαι?), Ὑψιπύλη, Κάβειροι (satyric?).

Ἐλευσίνιοι, Ἀργεῖοι (Ἀργεῖαι?), Ἐπίγονοι.

Δικτυουλκοί, Πολυδέκτης, Φορκίδες.

Μέμνων, Ψυχαστασία.

Περραιβίδες, Ἰξίων.

Μυσοί, Τήλεφος.

Theban legends of Dionysus seem to have formed the subject of no less than five plays: Σεμέλη ἢ Ὑδροφόροι, Διονύσου τροφοί (or Τροφοί), Βάκχαι, Ξάντριαι, Πενθεύς. The Argument to Euripides' Βάκχαι asserts that the story of that drama had been handled in Πενθεύς.

To reduce the number of these Dionysus-plays to the compass of a trilogy or tetralogy, various expedients have been proposed:

1. To seek other connexions for Διονύσου τροφοί and assume a tetralogy consisting of Σεμέλη ἢ Ὑδροφόροι, Βάκχαι, Πενθεύς, Ξάντριαι (satyric).

2. To regard Βάκχαι as an alternative name for

FRAGMENTS

Πενθείς, or for Ξάντραι (not satyric), or even for Βασσάραι.

3. To make Βάκχαι the title of the group Σεμέλη ἢ Ὑδροφόροι, Πενθείς, Ξάντραι.

4. To make Πενθείς the name of the trilogy Σεμέλη ἢ Ὑδροφόροι, Βάκχαι, Ξάντραι.

ΑΘΑΜΑΣ

Athamas, a hero localized in Boeotia and Thessaly, was the son of Aeolus according to the genealogy commonly adopted in antiquity. By his divine wife Nephele he had two children, Phrixus and Helle; by his second wife Ino, daughter of Cadmus, he had two sons, Learchus and Melicertes. Apollodorus, Library, iii. 4. 3 (cp. i. 9. 2) narrates that Zeus entrusted the newly-born Dionysus to Hermes, who conveyed him to Ino and Athamas, and persuaded them to rear the babe as a girl. In consequence of madness brought upon them by Hera in her indignation, Athamas hunted his elder son as a deer and killed him; Ino threw Melicertes into a boiling cauldron, and then, carrying it, together with the dead body of the child, leaped into the sea. The Argument to the first Isthmian Ode of Pindar reports a different version: that the corpse of Learchus was thrown into the cauldron by Ino, who then, having become mad, plunged into the sea. The Isthmian games were instituted by Sisyphus in honour of Melicertes.

ΑΙΤΝΑΙΑΙ

A Sicilian maiden named Thaleia or Aetna, having been embraced by Zeus, in fear of Hera's wrath prayed that the earth might open and swallow her up. Her prayer was granted, but when the time of her delivery was at hand, the earth opened again and twin boys came forth, who were called Palīci, because they had "come back" (ἀπὸ τοῦ πάλιν ἰκέσθαι) from the earth. The Palīci were worshipped (originally with human sacrifices) in the neighbourhood of Mount Aetna (Macrobius, Saturnalia, v. 19. 17; cp. Servius on Virgil, Aeneid, ix. 584).

"Having arrived in Sicily, as Hiero was then (476 B.C.) founding the city of Aetna, Aeschylus exhibited his Aetnae as an augury of a prosperous life for those who were uniting in the settlement of the city" (Life of Aeschylus).

The play is named Αἴτναίαι, The Women of Aetna, in the Medicean Catalogue, and so apparently in Frag. 9 and Frag. 10 (Nauck). The title has the form Αἴτναι in the Life and in Nauck's 7 and 8;

Αἴτνα in Nauck's 11, Aetna in Macrobius. Alexandrian scholars thought to distinguish a genuine from a spurious play of this name. See p. 375.

ΑΜΥΜΩΝΗ

"But the land of Argos being waterless, since Poseidon had dried up even the springs because of his anger at Inachus for testifying that it belonged to Hera, Danaüs sent his daughters to draw water. One of them, Amymone, as she was searching for water, threw a dart at a deer and hit a sleeping satyr. He, starting up, desired to force her; but Poseidon appearing on the scene, the satyr fled, and Amymone lay with Poseidon, and he revealed to her the springs at Lerna" (Apollodorus, Library, ii. 1. 4). The play was probably satyric.

ΑΡΓΕΙΟΙ

In the Medicean Catalogue and the Etymologicum Magnum (see under Fragment 7) the play bears the title Ἀργεῖοι, The Men of Argos. In the authors citing Fragment 6 and Nauck's 18 (Hesychius, Lexicon 1. 257) the name is Ἀργεῖαι, which suggests that the Chorus was formed of the mothers of the Argive commanders who fell in the attack on Thebes described in the extant play of Aeschylus. According to Welcker, the Ἐλευσίνιοι anticipated the first, the Ἀργεῖοι the second, part of Euripides' Suppliants. M. Schmidt in Philologus, xvi. (1860) 161, conjectured that the drama was entitled Ἀργεῖα from the daughter of Adrastus who married Polynices, and who, in Statius' Thebaid, was joined by Antigone in burying her father.

Fragment 155 has been assigned to this play.

Capaneus is left me with the remains of his lightning-smitten limbs that the thunderbolt had left behind (?)

From a lament, probably by the Chorus, on the Argive chieftains who fell in the first attack on Thebes; or possibly by Evadne over the body of her husband Capaneus, of whose destruction, by the lightning of Zeus, Eteocles is confident in Seven against Thebes 444. In Euripides' Suppliants the bodies of the other Argive champions were burned on a single funeral pyre, that of Capaneus was burned apart as a consecrated corpse; and upon his pyre his wife threw herself.

ΑΡΓΩ

In the Medicean Catalogue the play is entitled Ἄργω ἢ κωπαστής (so M); in the Aldine edition, Ἄργω ἢ κωπευστής. Referring the sub-title to the rowers of the Argo, Welcker proposed κωπευσταί; Hippenstiel, De Graecorum tragicorum principum fabularum nominibus, κωπασταί. Hartung, approved by Dieterich, read κωμασταί "revellers."

ΒΑΣΣΑΡΑΙ

Eratosthenes, Legends of the Constellations, 24. p. 140 (Robert), says of Órpheus that he paid no honour to Dionysus, but considered Helios to be the greatest of the gods and addressed him as Apollo; that, by making haste during the night, he reached at dawn the summit of Mt. Pangaeus, and waited there that he might see the rising of the sun; and that Dionysus, in his wrath, sent against him the Bassarides (as Aeschylus tells the story), who tore him to pieces and scattered his members, which were collected and buried by the Muses in Leibethra. To the same effect, Scholiast Germanicus, 84. 11.

The name Βασσάραι was given to Thracian (and to Phrygian and Lydian) bacchanals, who wore fox-skin caps and long embroidered cloaks, pictured in Miss Harrison's Prolegomena to the Study of Greek Religion, 458. The word βασσάραι (possibly of Phrygian origin, but carried elsewhere) means "fox." Cp. Fragment 29.

The play is entitled Βασσαρίδες in the Scholiast on Aristophanes, Thesmophoriazusae 135, and on Nicander, Theriaca 288.

To the Bassarae have been assigned Fragments 187, 215.

ΓΛΑΥΚΟΣ ΠΟΝΤΙΟΣ

Pausanias, Description of Greece ix. 22. 7: "At Anthedon by the sea is what is called 'Glaucus' Leap.' That Glaucus was a fisherman, who, because he had eaten of a grass, was changed into a daimon of the sea and foretells men the future, is believed by people in general, and especially do seafaring men every year tell stories about his prophetic art. Pindar and Aeschylus learned from the Anthedonians concerning him, but whereas the former did not have much to do with the legends in his poems, the latter worked them into a play." Plutarch, in his Life of Cicero 2, reports that there still existed in his time a short poem in tetrameters on Glaucus of the Sea written by the orator in his youth.

In Fragments 17-19 Glaucus describes his wanderings by sea. To the play, which was probably satyric, have been ascribed Fragments 203, 230, 231.

Strabo says that Euboïs was a city that had been engulfed by an earthquake. The Cenaean promontory is situated at the end of the peninsula at the N.W. extremity of Euboea. Near by is a mountain (about 2800 feet high), on the top of which Zeus Cenaeus was worshipped. From the promontory, Lichas, the herald of Heraeles, was hurled into the sea by his master because he had been the bearer of the poisoned robe sent by Deïaneira. Cp. ΓΛΑΥΚΟΣ ΠΟΤΝΙΕΥΣ

Potniae was a city in Boeotia where Glaucus, the son of Sisyphus and Merope, kept mares that he had accustomed to feed on human flesh in order to make them charge against the enemy with greater eagerness and speed. When this food failed, they devoured their master at the funeral games in honour of Pelias (Asclepiades, On the Subjects of Tragedy in Probus on Virgil, Georgics iii. 267). According to the Scholiast on Euripides, Orestes 318, the horses had eaten a (poisonous) grass, whereby they became mad and tore Glaucus asunder. Strabo, Geography x. 409, omits any mention of the cause of madness, which other writers attribute, now to the water of a sacred spring near Potniae, now to the anger of Aphrodite (because Glaucus prevented his mares from mating in order to increase their speed), now to their human food.

In Fragment 20 the Chorus utter their good wishes on Glaucus' departure for the games. In 21, 22, 23 the Messenger describes the contest, in which the title-hero was hurled from his chariot in the collision caused by the madness of the mares.

The Glaucus of Potniae was produced in 472 B.C. as the third member of the tetralogy Φινεύς, Πέρσαι, Γλαῦκος (Ποτνιαεύς according to a later Argument), Προμηθεύς (probably πυρκαεύς).

ΔΑΝΑΪΔΕΣ

When marriage with their cousins, the sons of Aegyptus, had been forced upon the daughters of Danaüs, their father commanded each to kill her husband during the marriage-night. Hypermestra alone, swayed by the charm of love, disobeyed (cp. Prometheus Bound 865). Of her, Horace, Od. iii. 11. 33 ff., says

The fragment refers to the custom that, on the morning after the marriage, newly-wed couples were wakened by song (cp. Theocritus, Idyll xviii. 56). If the speaker was a servant (who was not privy to the intended murder), the verses may belong to a prologue, which was followed by the appearance of the Chorus of Danaïds; but, so far as we know, the "wakening" was sung by friends of the bride and bridegroom, presumably the same as had, on the previous evening, sung the hymenaeus. If, as seems more probable, the speaker is Danaüs, he is describing what occurred either on the evening of the wedding or on the morning thereafter, before the discovery of the murder, and the lines form part of his defence before the court that tried him for his participation in the killing of his sons-in-law (Scholiast on Euripides, Orestes 872). The difficulty of interpretation is largely concerned with the application of the last five words of the text.

1. σὺν κόροις τε καὶ κόραις is the stereotyped form of a wish that the marriage may be fruitful in children. These words were said to brides by the singers of the wedding-song according to the Scholiast on Pindar and Hesychius, Lexicon s.v. κουριζόμενοι. Hermann holds to the ms. reading:

"And then the radiant light of the sun is setting, while I call them forth, saying 'let them make their bridegrooms graciously disposed, as is the custom, with boys and girls.'"

On this interpretation, Danaüs describes how, after the brides had departed to their new home, he addressed their companions; but the situation is not clear, the meaning of ἐγείρω is strained, and the explanation of νόμοισι peculiar. Toup's ἀνεισι transfers the scene to the morning, as does Wilamowitz' ἔσπε . . . ἐγείρω ("and when Dawn shall rouse the radiant light of the sun"); but the latter scholar can find in the following words no more definite idea than that certain persons are enjoined to make the young husbands (or the newly-wedded couples) friendly "with boys and girls."

2. σὺν κόροις τε καὶ κόραις means the companions of the speaker, who, with him, awaken the sleepers. So Welcker, reading ἀνεισι and θέλγων:

"And thereafter uprises the radiant light of the sun, while I, in company with youths and maidens, awaken the bridegrooms graciously disposed."

θέλγων is ironical; as is πρευμενεῖς, since Danaüs had married his daughters to suitors whom they, and he, detested, and whose murder he had planned.

The situation is moving: when the waking-song was sung, the husbands—all save Lynceus, who was married to Hypermestra—were sleeping the sleep of death. But the scene, because reported, is less dramatic than that in Euripides' Phaëthon, in which play (Frag. 781) Merops appears with a chorus of maidens who sing the nuptial song in honour of Phaëthon at the very moment when Phaëthon's corpse is being carried into the chamber of Clymene, the wife of Merops. In Wilhelm Tell the music of a wedding-procession is heard while Gessler is in the agonies of death.

Of all these things I am the cause.

These lines—the Bridal of Heaven and Earth, imitated by Euripides, Fragment 898—were spoken, says Athenaeus, by Aphrodite herself; and probably in defence of Hypermetra at her trial for disobedience to her father's command. ΕΛΕΥΣΙΝΙΟΙ

Plutarch, in his Life of Theseus 29, states that Theseus, in conjunction with Adrastus, effected the recovery of the bodies of the Argives slain before Thebes (in the expedition against that city undertaken by the seven champions); that Aeschylus made the recovery the result of persuasion on the part of Theseus, whereas Euripides, in his Suppliants, ascribed it to a victory over the Argives; and that Theseus appeared in Aeschylus' play, and out of kindness to Adrastus caused the leaders to be buried at Eleusis, the soldiery at Eleutheræ, where their tombs were still shown in his day.

ΕΠΙΓΟΝΟΙ

Ten years after the unsuccessful attack on Thebes described in The Seven against Thebes, the sons of the fallen chieftains, called the After-Born, avenged the death of their fathers in a second expedition, which resulted in the capture of the city. At the end of Euripides' Suppliants (l. 1213) Athena prophesies the success of the sons in the war that formed the theme of the Aeschylean drama. The legend of the victorious issue of the second expedition is known to the Iliad, in which (Δ 406) Sthenelus, the son of Capaneus, boasts the superiority of the sons over their fathers. But the tradition that the seven champions had each a son (named in Apollodorus, Library iii. 7. 2) who joined in the war, is apparently later than Homer. In The Seven against Thebes, Aeschylus made both Eteocles and Polynices die childless; but Pindar knew of Thersander, the son of Polynices and successor to his claim to the throne; and late writers report that Laodamas was the son of Eteocles.

Fragments 176, 247, 248 have been referred to The Epigoni.

ΗΔΩΝΟΙ

Apollodorus, Library iii. 5. 1, gives the following version of the legend of Lycurgus and his rejection of the god Dionysus :

“ And afterwards he (Dionysus) arrived at Cybela in Phrygia, and there, having been purified by Rhea, and learning the rites of initiation, he received from her the costume, and hastened through Thrace [against the Indians]. But Lycurgus, king of the Edonians, who dwell beside the river Strymon, was the first to insult and expel him. And Dionysus took refuge in the sea with Thetis, the daughter of Nereus, and the Bacchanals were taken captive and the multitude of the satyrs that followed him. But afterwards the Bacchanals were suddenly released, and Dionysus brought madness upon Lycurgus. And he, in his frenzy, struck with an axe and killed his son Dryas, imagining that he was lopping off the branch of a vine ; and when he had cut off his son’s extremities, he came to his senses. But since the land remained barren, the god made known by an oracle that it would bear fruit if Lycurgus were put to death. On hearing this, the Edonians took him to Mt. Pangaeus, and bound him ; and there, by the will of Dionysus, he died, destroyed by horses.”

Fragment 27 refers to the arrival of Dionysus and his worshippers, 28 to the house of Lycurgus ; to whom, or to one of his attendants, belong the satirical descriptions of the god in 29-32.

To The Edonians have been ascribed Fragments 173, 188, 193, 201, 202.

From the parodus of the play. In ll. 2-11 the Chorus of Edonians describe what Milton calls "the barbarous dissonance of Bacchus and his revellers." Cotys, Cotyto, or Cotytto, was a Thracian goddess, akin to Rhea-Cybele, whose worship became popular at Athens. Her rites resembled those of the Phrygian Sabazius, whose ritual was similar to that of Bacchus. The Orphic ceremonies had their origin among the Thracians.

Hermann thought it was a designation of a locust. See Wilamowitz, Aischylos: Interpretationen p. 217.

ΗΛΙΑΔΕΣ

The Daughters of Helios dealt with the legend of Phaëthon, whose rashness in driving the chariot of the Sun, his father, caused the parching of the earth, and thereby his punishment at the hands of Zeus, whose thunderbolt hurled him into the river Eridanus. In pity for the unceasing grief of Phaëthon's sisters, Zeus turned them into poplars, from which, it was believed, their tears oozed forth and became amber, the stone of light; a poetic fancy due to the association of ἡλεκτρον "amber" with ἡλέκτωρ "the beaming sun."

The form assumed by the myth in Aeschylus is unknown; but it is certain that Euripides in his Phaëthon differed widely from the older poet. Aeschylus was in part dependent on Hesiod for the story; but whereas Hesiod knew of seven daughters of Helios, Aeschylus recognized only three—Lampetië, Aegle, and Phaëthousa—children of the Sun-god and Rhode. Furthermore he transferred to Iberia the scene of the fall of Phaëthon.

Fragments 172, 177, 185 have been ascribed to the play.

To explain the rising of the sun in the east after it had set in the west, Greek fancy invented the myth that the Sun-god possessed a golden bowl, in which he, together with his steeds, was carried during the night across the ocean to the place of his rising. When Heracles was journeying to Erythea to capture the oxen of Geryon (Frag. 37), Helios lent his bowl to the hero; who, in Gerhard's Auserlesene griechische Vasenbilder, pl. 109, is pictured sitting therein. In the Veda and in Germanic and Lettic myths the sun appears in the form of a golden bowl.

ΗΡΑΚΛΕΙΔΑΙ

Of the personages, action, and scene of The Children of Heracles nothing is known. It is, however, probable that Aeschylus in part anticipated Euripides, who, in his same-named play, represented Athens as the refuge of the fugitives from the persecution of Eurystheus, the willingness of Macaria, the daughter of Heracles, to sacrifice her life as the price of victory over the Argive invaders of Attica, and the triumph of the children under the leadership of the aged Iolaüs, the nephew of Heracles.

ΘΑΛΑΜΟΠΟΙΟΙ

A play of this name is unknown to the Catalogue in the Medicean ms., and is mentioned only by Pollux, citing Fragment 39. Some suppose that it is an alternative title of the Αιγύπτιοι, and that the name is derived from the carpenters who constructed the bridal chambers in which the Danaïds killed their husbands. Hartung proposed to read Θαλαμηπόλοι "attendants on the bridal chambers." Welcker rejected connexion with the Danaïd-myth and made the play precede the Ίφιγένεια and Ίέρειαι.

To the play have been referred Fragments 162, 163, 178, 189, 206, 238.

Come! Let some one work out in the ceiling a Lesbian moulding in triangular rhythms.

A ceiling-compartment was formed, at its lower part, by "ladders" (κλιμακίδες) laid across the "main beams" (σελίδες). Below the former, in the present case, ran a moulding with swelling above and hollow below (a cyma reversa) and ornamented with a leaf-and-tongue pattern that approximates a triangle. The Lesbian cyma appears in the Tholos at Epidaurus.

ΘΕΩΡΟΙ ἢ ΙΣΘΜΙΑΣΤΑΙ

The original title was probably Θεωροί, The Spectators; to which was added that defining the scene: The Spectators at the Isthmian games.

Athenaeus, Deipnosophists xiv. 27. p. 629 F.

And further these old σκωπεύματα

Athenaeus defines the form of the σκώψ-dance as a figure in which people are represented as looking at an object (ἀποσκοπούντων) by making an arch over their brows. He has, however, here confused σκώψ with σκοπός, which Hesychius, Lexicon 4. 216, describes as a dance in which the dancers shaded their eyes (cp. ὑπόσκοπον χέρα, Aeschylus, Frag. 339 Nauck). The screech-owl dance (σκώψ) got its name, says Athenaeus ix. 45. p. 391 A, from the variety of motion displayed by the bird.

ΘΡΗΣΣΑΙ

The play derives its title from Thracian women, captives of Ajax, who formed the Chorus and had a like function with the sailors from Salamis in Sophocles' Ajax: to support with their sympathy the hero who had suffered the ignominy of defeat at the hands of Odysseus in the contest for the arms of Achilles, and after his suicide to bewail his death. Though captives, they even dared to protest against the inhumanity of Menelaüs, who would refuse burial to the body of their master. In Sophocles' play, Ajax killed himself on the stage and in solitude; in Aeschylus, his suicide was reported by a messenger, an eye-witness of the deed.

See Fragments 159, 194, 264.

Scholiast on Sophocles, Ajax 833: φησὶν δὲ περὶ αὐτοῦ (τοῦ Αἴαντος) Αἰσχύλος ὅτι καὶ τὸ ξίφος ἐκάμπτετο, οὐδαμῆ ἐνδιδόντος τοῦ χρωτὸς τῆ σφαγῆ, τόξον ὡς τις ἐντείνων, πρὶν δὴ τις, φησί, παροῦσα δαίμων ἔδειξεν αὐτῷ κατὰ ποῖον μέρος δεῖ χρήσασθαι τῆ σφαγῆ. L. 1 restored by Hermann, l. 2 (as l. 1) by Hartung, l. 3 by Sidgwick. The vital part was τὰ περὶ (or κατὰ) τὴν μασχάλην according to the Scholiast on Sophocles and to Scholiasts TV on Ξ 404 (cp. Eustathius on Iliad 995. 1); the collar-bone or the side according to the Scholiast on Lycophron, Alexandra 455 (cp. Ajax 834). Wecklein reads ἔκαμπτε for Hermann's ἔκαμψε, and πρὶν δὴ παρῶν τις δαιμόνων <τὸ καίριον> ἔδειξεν αὐτῷ μασχάλης.

Back he bent his sword, as when a man bends a bow, for that his body offered no place to murderous death, until at last some goddess appeared and showed him [the vital spot].

The passage has reference to the legend that the body of Ajax, when a babe, having been wrapped by Heracles in his lion-skin, became invulnerable except at the spot where Heracles' quiver prevented the hide from touching it. According to Homer, Ajax was vulnerable, hence the legend was probably derived by Aeschylus from a Cyclic poet; and is certainly due to the desire to make Ajax equally invulnerable with Achilles. The sword with which Ajax slew himself had been given him by Hector.

IEPEIAI

The Priestesses was made by Weleker the third member of a trilogy, whose preceding parts were the Θαλαμοποιοί and the Ἰφιγένεια. By others it has been associated with the Μυσοί and Τήλεφος, or with the Τήλεφος and Ἰφιγένεια. See Fragment 214.

“ μέλισσαι is a term used primarily of the priestesses of Demeter, and by a misuse of language applied to all priestesses because of the purity of the animal.” Coins of the Ephesian Artemis as early as the sixth century, and a Vatican statue of the same goddess, show the bee as an emblem.

ΙΞΙΩΝ

Ixion was famous in Greek tradition as the first man to shed kindred blood (Pindar, Pythian 2. 31, cp Eumenides 718), and as the first to receive purification from the crime of murder. His father's name is variously reported, usually as Phlegyas, but Aeschylus made him the son of Antion. His mother was Perimela, the daughter of Amythaon. Under promise of rich wedding-gifts to Eioneus (or Deioneus), the father of Dia, he married her, and by her had a son, Peirithoüs. On his refusal to make over to his father-in-law the wedding-gifts due to him, Eioneus took Ixion's horses as a pledge of payment; whereupon Ixion, pretending that he would submit himself to his good pleasure, sent for Eioneus and caused him to fall into a fiery pit. For this offence he could obtain purification from neither man nor any god, until Zeus, showing himself a "gracious avenger" (Frag. 92 N.), took compassion on his suppliant, cleansed him of bloodshed, and even raised him to Olympus. There Ixion conceived a mad passion for the Queen of Heaven, and having besought her to yield to his desires, Zeus fashioned a cloud in the semblance of Hera. Ixion lay with the cloud, and from this union sprang the centaurs. In punishment for this impious crime, Zeus bound him to a wheel on which he whirls in an eternity of torment. To the above effect, in the main, Diodorus of Sicily, Historical Library iv. 69 3.

The play probably followed the Perrhaebides, which took its name from the Chorus of women of Perrhaebia in Thessaly, which district, or the city of Gyrtion in the same, Ixion had subjected to his rule. The theme of the first play may have been the deception and murder of Eioneus; that of the Ixion, the purification of the murderer. The third member of the trilogy is unknown.

Fragment 182 has been referred to the Ixion.

ΙΦΙΓΕΝΕΙΑ

The theme of the play was probably the sacrifice of Iphigenia at Aulis, to which place she was brought by her mother at the instance of Agamemnon, who alleged his intention of betrothing his daughter to Achilles. The subject may thus have anticipated Sophocles' Iphigenia and Euripides' Iphigenia at Aulis.

KABEIPOI¹

This drama, which has its name from the Chorus, is the earliest literary witness to the Cabiri, more often called the Great Gods in Samothrace and Lemnos, the most ancient and famous seats of their worship in the Aegean. Originally pre-Hellenic chthonian divinities, whose primal home was Phrygia, Phoenicia, or among the Pelasgians of Greece, their cult gradually accommodated itself to the religion of the peoples with which it came into contact ; until, in the historical period, the Cabiri appear as daimones who foster vegetative life and protect seafaring folk, and whose Mysteries in course of time spread over the greater part of the Greek world.

Athenaeus, Deipnosophists x. 33. p. 428 F, declares that it was Aeschylus, not Euripides (in the Alcestis), who first introduced drunken people to the sight of the spectators of "tragedy" ; and that this evil eminence was displayed in his Cabiri, in which play he represented Jason and his companions as drunk. Fragment 48 would seem to refer to the hospitable reception of the Argonauts by the Cabiri, who furnished them with an abundance of wine upon their landing at Lemnos, the first stopping-place of the Argo on its eastward voyage. The introduction of a drunken orgy has caused many scholars to regard the play as satyric rather than tragic. Whether pure tragedy may thus relax its gravity is a question that has been raised also in connexion with the Ὀστολόγοι of Aeschylus and the Σύνδειπνοι of Sophocles.

The Scholiast on Pindar, Pythian 4. 303 (171), states that the names of the heroes of the Argonautic expedition were set forth in the Κάβειροι, as also in the Λήμνιοι of Sophocles.

Fragment 164 has been referred to this play.

The Cabiri jestingly threaten to produce so excellent, or so abundant, a vintage that either the Argonauts will drink so much that no wine will be kept to make vinegar; or that vinegar shall be poured out from the casks to give place to wine. If ὄξους means "ordinary wine," the meaning is that it will have to be thrown away for the better quality.

ΚΑΡΕΣ ἢ ΕΥΡΩΠΗ

Europe, the protagonist in the drama bearing her name as an alternative title, in Fragment 50 tells of her carrying-off by the bull, of the three sons she bore to Zeus (Minos, Rhadamanthys, and Sarpedon), and of her anxiety as to the fate of her youngest, Sarpedon, whose warlike spirit had incited him to leave his home for Troy in order to render assistance to the city now attacked by the Achaeans.

The scene was Lycia, whither Europe had come from Crete together with her son. That the Chorus consisted of Carians, though Sarpedon was Prince of Lycia, may be due to the fact that (as Strabo, Geography xiv. 5. p. 675, informs us) the poets often included the Lycians among the Carians, who were the most famous of all the races in south-western Asia Minor. The confusion had the advantage of enabling the poet to reproduce the lamentations over the dead for which the Carians were celebrated.

Popular tradition was inconsistent as to the name of Sarpedon's mother. Aeschylus followed the Hesiodic version in preference to that of Homer, who calls her Laodamia. Nor was he disturbed by the Homeric genealogy, by which Sarpedon was made the grandson of Bellerophon on the mother's side. In the poet's time no one had yet sought, as did the mythographers later, to remove the difficulty, either by assuming two Sarpedons (one the son of Laodamia, the other the son of Europe) or by the notion that there was one Sarpedon, who had been permitted by his father Zeus to live through three generations.

The drama probably dealt with the reception of the news of the hero's death at the hands of Patroclus and with the arrival of his body in Lycia, borne thither by Sleep and Death (cp. II 682). All other Homeric warriors who fell before Troy were buried in the Troad; Sarpedon alone had burial in his own land.

To this play have been ascribed Fragments 175, 231.

And a lush meadow gave friendly welcome to the bull. In such wise, biding where he was,¹ did Zeus succeed in his unlaboured theft of me from my aged sire.² Why the whole tale? In few words I recount it all. A mortal woman, united to a god I lost the holiness of maidenhood, but I was joined in wedlock with him who owned his children equally with me.³ Thrice in childbirth did I endure the pangs of woman-kind, and the field wherein he sowed complained not to bring forth the seed of a noble sire. First of these mighty implantings that I bare was Minos. . . .⁴ Second, I brought forth Rhadamanthys,⁵ he who of my sons is free from death; yet, though he lives, mine eyes behold him not—and to them that love, the absent bring no delight. Third was he for whom I am now sore distressed in heart, even Sarpedon; for Ares' warlike spirit hath laid hold of him. For it is famed abroad that the choicest flower of all Hellas has come, preëminent in valorous strength, and makes loud boast

¹ Since Europe declares that Zeus remained "where he was" (namely in Crete), she implies that her carrying-off had been effected by the bull as the agent of the god, and not (as in the ordinary version of the legend) by the god himself transformed into the animal.

⁴ In the lacuna were described the deeds, honours, and death of Minos; but Minos, since Rhadamanthys alone is called immortal, was probably not made the judge of the dead.

⁵ Rhadamanthys had been translated either to the Elysian Field (δ 563) or to the Islands of the Blest (Pindar, Olympian 2. 73).

¹ The desire to employ the favourite antithesis of δρᾶν and πάσχειν is responsible for the condensed phrase, in which the emphasis rests on πάθη (I fear lest, as he may work some evil upon his foes, so he may suffer some evil at their hands).

MEMNON

According to the story in the Aethiopsis of the Cyclic poet Arctinus of Miletus, as summarized by Proclus in his Chrestomathy 458, Achilles is informed by his mother Thetis that Memnon, the son of Eos, clad in full armour fashioned by Hephaestus, has come to the aid of the Trojans. Antilochus, the son of Nestor, is slain in battle by the Ethiopian prince, who in turn is slain by Achilles, whose mother begs of Zeus the boon of immortality for her son. Achilles routs the Trojans, bursts into the city, is killed by Paris and Apollo; his body is borne to the ships by Ajax, while Odysseus keeps the Trojans at bay. Thetis, attended by the Muses and her sister Nereïds, arrives on the scene, bewails her son, whose body she takes from the funeral pyre and carries to the island of Leuce.

The trilogy consisted of The Μέμνων, Ψυχοστασία, Weighing of Souls (the order is disputed), and a third play unknown, but probably dealing with the death of Achilles. In the Ψυχοστασία Zeus was represented as holding aloft the balance, in the scales of which were the souls of Achilles and Memnon, while beneath each stood Thetis and Eos, praying each for the life of her son. Comparing the passage in the Iliad (X 210), in which Zeus weighs the fates of Achilles and Hector, Plutarch (How a Young Man ought to hear Poems 2. p. 17 A) says that Aeschylus accommodated a whole play to this fable.

Fragments 155, 161, 181, 183 have been referred to the Memnon.

Bronze, unshorn (?) and stretched over the shield

Restoration and translation are wholly uncertain. The ancients were hopelessly confused between the words ἀθηρής, ἀθειρής, ἀπειρής, ἀτηρής, ἀθήρητος, ἀθέριτος. Possibly the bronze of a shield may be said to be "unshorn," "unconquered," since a weapon "shears off" what it strikes (cp. Euripides, Suppliants 716). Tovey, Journal of Philology v. (1878) 221, proposed to read, after Seven against Thebes 559, χαλκὸν ἀθέριστον· ἀσπίδος δ' ὑπερτενῆς | ἐξῶθεν κτλ. Blomfield would put the verse after Agam. 897.

Lord of Phthia, Achilles! Why, oh why, when thou hearest the man-slaying

By the repetition of l. 2 in Frogs 1266, 1271, 1275, 1277, after other high-sounding dactylic measures, Euripides is here seeking (inter alia) to ridicule Aeschylus for his iteration of the refrain and his strange use of interjections. In the present instance κόπον yields an intelligible sense with ἀνδροδάϊκτον; in the other cases the word (and the entire verse) has no connexion with what precedes, being solely designed to mark the obscurity of Aeschylus' choral lyrics.

A later Scholiast on Frogs 1264 and on Prom. 441 ascribes the two verses to envoys, whose pleadings that Achilles enter the battle were received with inflexible silence.

ΜΥΣΟΙ

According to the common version of the legend, Telephus, son of Heracles and Auge, daughter of Aleüs of Tegea, being ignorant of his parents, was directed by an oracle to seek for them in Mysia, of which country Teuthras was ruler. Aristotle (Poetics 1460 a 32), however, referring to the fault that improbable incidents are sometimes set forth within a play (whereas they ought, if possible, to be external, as part of the fable) alludes to Telephus as having come speechless all the way from Tegea to Mysia, a taboo explicable only if he had incurred blood-guiltiness (cp. Eumenides 448). Telephus had, in fact, killed his maternal uncles.

NIOBH

The place and progress of the action of this famous drama cannot be determined with certainty. Apart from the title-heroine, the only person known to participate in the action is Tantalus, the father of Niobe—himself, like his daughter, destroyed because of evil pride engendered by great good fortune. Niobe, according to Homer (Ω 602 ff.), had vaunted herself a more prolific mother than Leto, whose two children, Apollo and Artemis, therefore slew her seven sons and seven daughters. From Fragment 81 it has been inferred that the scene remained Thebes throughout the play. Since it is expressly reported that Sophocles in his Niobe made the mother return to her native Lydia after the destruction of her children in Thebes, it is likely that this transference of the place of action from Thebes to Lydia was not anticipated by Aeschylus.—The older poet gives no hint as to the reason for the calamity visited by Zeus upon Amphion, Niobe's husband and his own son.

Sources other than the text inform us that Aeschylus gave Niobe fourteen children, a number adopted by Euripides and Aristophanes; whereas, apart from other variations in the tradition, Homer states that they were twelve, Hesiod twenty, equally divided as to sex.—Until the third part of the play Niobe sat speechless upon the tomb of her dead offspring, apparently the most celebrated instance of the dramatic device of silence often employed by Aeschylus, and for which he is ridiculed by Euripides in Aristophanes, Frogs 911.

It has been disputed whether the title refers only to the one play Niobe, or whether, like Prometheus, it was both a collective designation of an entire trilogy and also the name of a single drama; in any case, as to the dramas presented at the same time we have no information. Welcker sought to establish the group Τροφοί (distinct from Διονύσου τροφοί), Νιόβη, Προπομποί. R. J. Walker finds a trilogy in Καλλιστώ, Ἀταλάντη, Νιόβη on the ground that all the persons thus named suffered metamorphosis, and that Artemis was prominent in each member of the group. From Aristotle (Poetics 18. 1456 a 16) it would seem that Aeschylus did not, like some playwrights, deal with the whole story of Niobe. There is no indication whether or not Aeschylus adopted the legend that Niobe was turned into stone.

Fragments 197, 227, 240 have been ascribed to the Niobe.

ΞΑΝΤΡΙΑΙ

The subject of this play is the rejection of the newly instituted worship of Dionysus either by Pentheus or by the daughters of Minyas. The Scholiast on Eumenides 24 states that the death of Pentheus took place, in the Ξάντριοι, on Mt. Cithaeron; and Philostratus (Images 3. 18) describes a picture in which the mother and aunts of Pentheus rend asunder (ξάινουσι) the body of the unbelieving prince. On the other hand, Aelian (Historical Miscellanies 3. 42, cp. Ovid, Metamorphoses 14. 32 ff.) relates that Leucippe, Arsippe, and Alcithoë, the daughters of Minyas, out of love for their husbands, held themselves aloof from the orgiastic rites of Dionysus and attended to their weaving (in which ease Ξάντριοι might yield the meaning "Wool-Carders") and to punish their obstinacy, the god brought madness upon the sisters, so that they tore to pieces the son of Leucippe; in consequence of which deed of blood they were pursued by the Maenads.—Hera appeared in the play in the guise of a priestess begging alms (Fragment 84); and Bacchic frenzy was incorporated as Lyssa (Fragment 85). By some the drama is regarded as satyric.

ΟΠΛΩΝ ΚΡΙΣΙΣ

The Award of the Arms, the first play of the Ajax-trilogy, dealt with the contest between Ajax and Odysseus for the arms of Achilles after that hero's death. From Fragment 90 it appears that each of the chieftains set forth his pretensions and indulged in detraction of his rival. According to a verse of the Odyssey (λ 547, rejected by Aristarchus) the Trojans were the judges; according to the Aethiopis of Arctinus the award was made by Trojan captives; according to Lesches' Little Iliad the decision in favour of Odysseus resulted from the fact that a Trojan, overheard by Achaean scouts under the walls of the city, pronounced that warrior more redoubtable than Ajax. The constitution of the Chorus is uncertain. Fragment 89 is cited as addressed to Thetis by some one who called upon the Nereïds to make the award. Welcker held that Trojan captives formed the choral group.

Fragment 189 has been referred to the play.

ΟΣΤΟΛΟΓΟΙ

The Bone-Gatherers was a tragedy, if, as seems not improbable, the Chorus consisted of the relatives of the suitors of Penelope who came to exact vengeance from Odysseus for the slaughter of their kin and to collect their bones after their bodies had been burned on the funeral pyre (cp. ω 417). On this supposition, Fragments 94 and 95 were spoken by Odysseus standing by the corpses of the suitors and recounting the insults he had received at their hands.

A counter interpretation, regarding the play as satyric, derives the title from the hungry beggars in the palace at Ithaca, who collected the bones hurled at them by the suitors (cp. υ 299, σ 394).

Eurymachus here, another, brought no less unseemly outrage upon me; for he continually made my head his mark, and at it, with bent-armed casts, his vigorous hand kept aiming true.

The poet has in mind that form of the cottabus-game (κότταβος or κόσσαβος) in which each of the players so bent his arm and turned his wrist as to aim the wine left in the bottom of his cup at the head of a small bronze figure (μάνης) placed in a saucer (πλάστιγξ).

ΠΑΛΑΜΗΔΗΣ

Palamedes, son of Nauplius, was the human, as Prometheus was the divine, inventor or discoverer of arts and sciences useful to man; and to both were ascribed the introduction of the alphabet, number, and the skill to know the periods of the stars. Later epic and the tragic drama were especially concerned with the manner of his death at Troy. According to the legend probably preferred by the tragedians, his violent end was due to the ancient enmity of Odysseus, whose feigned madness to escape participation in the Trojan war had been detected by the ingenuity of Palamedes. One account had him drowned by Odysseus and Diomedes; another had him lured into a well in search of treasure and then crushed with stones. More famous was the story that Odysseus, in concert with Agamemnon (to whom Palamedes, as leader of the peace party, was opposed) concocted a plot to show that their adversary purposed to betray the Greeks: gold was hidden in his tent, likewise a letter purporting to be written to him by Priam, on the discovery of which by the people he was stoned to death by Odysseus and Diomedes.

Nauplius, failing to obtain justice from the murderers of his son, took vengeance on the Greek commanders by raising deceptive fire-signals on the Capherean cliffs in Euboea at the time of their homeward voyage.

Fragment 252 has been referred to this play.

ΠΡΟΜΗΘΕΙΣ

The Medicean Catalogue of Aeschylus' plays names three entitled Προμηθεΐς (δεσμώτης, λυόμενος, πυρφόρος); a fourth, Προμηθεὺς πυρκαεΐς (Pollux, Vocabulary 9. 156, 10. 64) was probably the satyric drama of the trilogy Φινεύς, Πέρσαι, Γλαῦκος (πόντιος) produced in 472 B.C. From the Scholiast on Prom. 511 it is to be inferred that the Λυόμενος followed the Δεσμώτης. The theme and place of the Πυρφόρος are still disputed: (1) it is another name for the Πυρκαεΐς; (2) it preceded the Δεσμώτης in the trilogy and dealt with the Titan's theft of fire—in this sense, it is the Fire-Bringer or Fire-Giver; (3) as the Fire-Bearer, it followed the Λυόμενος, and described the inauguration of the Προμηθήθεια, the Athenian festival at which torch-races were held in honour of the Titan, now become the god of the potter-guild. Some, who follow Canter in identifying the Πυρφόρος with the Πυρκαεΐς, maintain that it was the satyric drama, and dealt with the Attic worship of the god. A satyr-play in the Prometheus-trilogy is unknown.

The extract from the Literary History, appended to the Life of the poet in the Medicean and many other manuscripts, says that "some of Aeschylus' plays, as those entitled Prometheus (οἱ Προμηθεΐς), dealt only with gods." The singular Προμηθεΐς may at times be a collective title; but it generally indicates a particular play whose more exact designation was unknown or neglected. Late writers sometimes cite, as from the Δεσμώτης, passages not appearing in that play: these should, if possible, be located among the other dramas of the group rather than forced into the text of the extant tragedy.

ΠΡΟΜΗΘΕΥΣ ΛΥΟΜΕΝΟΣ

Fragments 104, 105, 106 are from the parodus of the Chorus of Titans, now released from Tartarus by the clemency of Zeus. To them Prometheus describes his tortures (Frag. 107) and his benefits to man (Frag. 108). In his search for the golden apples of the Hesperides, Heracles, having come to the Caucasus, where Prometheus is confined, receives from him directions concerning his course through the land of the peoples in the farthest north (Frag. 109–111) and the perils to be encountered on his homeward march after slaying Geryon in the farthest west (Frag. 112, cp. 37). Frag. 113–114 refer to Heracles' shooting of the eagle that fed on the vitals of the Titan.

Ye race of Titans, offspring of Uranus, bloodkinsmen mine! Behold me fettered, clamped to these rough rocks, even as a ship is moored fast by timid sailors, fearful of night because of the roaring sea. Thus hath Zeus, the son of Cronus, fastened me, and to the will of Zeus hath Hephaestus lent his hand. With cruel art hath he riven my limbs by driving in these bolts. Ah, unhappy that I am!
 By his skill transfixed, I tenant this stronghold of the Furies. And now, each third woeful day, with dreadful swoop, the minister of Zeus with his hooked talons rends me asunder by his cruel repast. Then, crammed and glutted to the full on my fat liver, he utters a prodigious scream and, soaring aloft, with winged tail fawns upon my gore. But when my gnawed liver swells, renewed in growth, greedily doth he return anew to his fell repast. Thus do I feed this guardian of my awful torture, who mutilates me living with never-ending pain. For fettered, as ye see, by the bonds of Zeus, I have no power to drive from my vitals the accursed bird. Thus, robbed of self-defence, I endure woes fraught with torment: longing for death, I look around for an ending of my misery; but by the doom of Zeus I am thrust far from death. And this my ancient dolorous agony, intensified by the dreadful centuries, is fastened upon my body, from which there fall, melted by the blazing sun, drops that unceasingly pour upon the rocks of Caucasus.

Spoken, says Plutarch, by Prometheus to the satyr who desired to kiss and embrace fire on seeing it for the first time. Eustathius took τράγος to be the nominative used for the vocative; and the passage thus interpreted has been regarded as a proof that the satyr of the satyr-play was addressed as "goat." The translation assumes the existence of a proverb about a goat that burnt his beard (Shorey in Classical Philology iv. (1904) 433).

ΠΡΟΜΗΘΕΥΣ ΠΥΡΦΟΡΟΣ

Apart from Fragment 118, the only extant reference to Prometheus the Fire-Bearer is contained in the scholium on Prom. 94, where the statement is made that, in the Πυρφόρος, Prometheus declared that he had been bound (δεδεσθαι) thirty thousand years (to the same effect, Hyginus, Astronomy 2. 15, 454 but without naming the play). On the assumption that the Πυρφόρος preceded the Δεσμώτης and that the Titan was prophesying the duration of his bondage, Hartung conjectured δεδήσεσθαι, Cobet δεθήσεσθαι. Welcker proposed to refer the utterance of Prometheus to the Λυόμενος; in Δεσμώτης l. 774 the hero says to Io that he shall be released by her descendant in the thirteenth generation.

ΣΑΛΑΜΙΝΙΑΙ

In Aristophanes, Frogs 1040, Aeschylus declares that his spirit, taking its impress from Homer, created many types of excellence, such as Patroclus and Teucer, the lion-hearted. It is highly probable that The Women of Salamis, the third play of the Ajax-trilogy, had as its theme the fortunes of Teucer, Ajax' half-brother, after his return from Troy with Eurysaces, the son of Ajax. Tradition reports Teucer's repudiation by his father Telamon, inconsolable at the loss of Ajax, for whose death he held Teucer responsible; Teucer's expulsion from his home; and his founding a new Salamis in Cyprus. The Chorus probably consisted of women of Salamis, who joined with their mistress Eriboea in lamenting the death of her son. The drama may have ended with the inauguration of the annual festival in honour of Ajax, whose virtues and unhappy fate were thus commemorated by his aged father.

The play is entitled Σαλαμίνιαι in Herodian (see Frag. 120), Σαλαμίνιοι in the Medicean Catalogue.

To The Women of Salamis have been referred Fragments 157, 167, 196, 232, 263.

ΣΙΣΥΦΟΣ

Σίσυφος δραπέτης, Sisyphus the Runaway, is named only in the Medicean Catalogue; Σίσυφος πετροκυλιστής, Sisyphus the Stone-Roller, is mentioned twice in grammarians; elsewhere the form of citation is simply Σίσυφος.

The first-named drama was satyric; its theme, the escape from Hades of the crafty Corinthian king. According to the fabulous story told by Pherecydes (Frag. 78 in Müller, Fragmenta Historicorum Graecorum, i. p. 91) Sisyphus made known to Asopus that it was Zeus who had carried off his daughter Aegina; in punishment for which offence the god sent Death against the babblers; but Sisyphus bound Death fast, so that men ceased to die, until Ares came to the rescue, released Death, and gave Sisyphus into his power. Before he died, however, Sisyphus directed his wife Merope to omit his funeral rites, so that Hades, being deprived of his customary offerings, was persuaded by the cunning trickster to let him go back to life in order to complain of his wife's neglect. But, once in the upper world, he refused to return, and had to be fetched back by Hermes.—The Satyrs forming the Chorus were probably represented as initiates if the play was a parody of the Dionysiac-Orphic mysteries. (Sisyphus the Stone-Roller is one of the six dramas mentioned by the ancients in connexion with the charge of impiety brought against the poet.)

Σίσυφος πετροκυλιστής is probably identical with the Σίσυφος δραπέτης (at least Frag. 127 savours of a satyr-play); and the conclusion of the single drama may have been the famous punishment inflicted on the "craftiest of men" (cp. λ 593).

For the stranger a garland, an ancient crown, the best of bonds, as Prometheus said.

Athenaeus (xv. 13. p. 672 E-F) cites Menodotus of Samos to the effect that, after Zeus had freed Prometheus from his bonds and the Titan had professed himself willing to make a "voluntary and painless" expiation for his theft of fire, Zeus ordered him to wear a garland as a symbolic punishment; and that the Carian custom of wearing garlands of osier was a memorial of the shackles once worn by Prometheus, the benefactor of mankind. Athenaeus himself (xv.

16. p. 674 D) states that Aeschylus, in the Prometheus Unbound, distinctly says: "In honour of Prometheus we place garlands on our heads as an atonement for his bonds."

ἐκ Προμηθέως λόγου may signify either (1) that in τῷ δὲ ξένῳ . . . λόγου the (unknown) speaker is simply referring to the "story of Prometheus"; or (2) that the words δεσμῶν ἄριστος were spoken by the Titan in the Prometheus Unbound as an indication of his satisfaction with the form of retribution imposed on him after his release from the torture of his bonds. The latter explanation would dispose of the inconsistency thought by Athenaeus to exist between the utterance of Prometheus quoted above (674 D) and Fragment 128: namely, that a garland, which in later times was worn as a symbol of the agony of Prometheus, could not have been praised by the sufferer himself. If the second interpretation is correct, the Prometheus-trilogy is earlier than 467 B.C., the date of the production of the Sphinx.

The "stranger" is probably Oedipus; but the situation is unknown.

ΤΗΛΕΦΟΣ

According to the Cyclic epic, the Cyprian Lays, Telephus, king of Mysia, having been wounded by the lance of Achilles in the first expedition of the Greeks against Troy, had recourse to the Delphic oracle, which returned the answer ὁ τρώσας καὶ ἰάσεται, "he who wounded, he shall also heal." The drama may also have adopted the legend that Telephus went to Argos, where, by the counsel of Clytemnestra, he seized the infant Orestes, whom he threatened to kill unless Agamemnon persuaded Achilles to heal him of his wound. The Scholiast on Aristophanes, Acharnians 323, says that, in Aeschylus, Telephus, in order to secure his safety among the Greeks, laid hold of Orestes. Since it is the Telephus of Euripides that is ridiculed by Aristophanes, it is supposed by many scholars that "Aeschylus" is an error for "Euripides" in the statement of the Scholiast.

ΤΟΞΟΤΙΔΕΣ

Actaeon, the hunter, turned into a deer, was torn asunder by his dogs, who did not recognize their master. The common version of the legend—that he was thus punished by Artemis for having seen her bathing—seems to have been adopted by Aeschylus. The Chorus of "Archer-Maidens" were nymphs, attendants of Artemis in the chase.

ΦΙΛΟΚΤΗΤΗΣ

The story of Philoctetes, king of Malis, touched upon in Iliad B 721, was narrated at length in two Cyclic epics—the Little Iliad by Lesches and the Destruction of Ilium by Arctinus. On their expedition to Troy, the Greeks abandoned Philoctetes on the island of Lemnos because, having been bitten in the foot by a poisonous snake, his screams of pain and the odour from his wound rendered his presence intolerable. In the tenth year of the war, when the Greeks were despairing of victory, they learned from the seer Helenus that Troy could not be taken without the aid of Philoctetes and his bow and arrows, weapons given him by the dying Heracles, who had himself received them from Apollo. Diomedes was accordingly sent to Lemnos, and fetched thence the hero and his arms.

In his fifty-second Discourse (4-10), Dion of Prusa, surnamed the "golden-mouthed," gives a brief comparison of the Philoctetes of Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides. In the Aeschylean play, instead of the noble Diomedes, the "shrewd and crafty" Odysseus was the envoy. Unchanged in aspect and voice by Athena, he appeared before Philoctetes, but was unrecognized because the powers of the sufferer had been impaired by his disease, his hardships, and his solitary life. The Chorus consisted of men of Lemnos, who had left Philoctetes unvisited until then—a more tragic and a simpler device (says Dion) than the excuse proffered by them according to Euripides—so that the hero could with good reason set forth to them, as something new, the story of his desertion by the Greeks and the cause of his distress. Odysseus sought to cheer Philoctetes and to gain his confidence by a false tale—disaster had befallen the Greeks; Agamemnon was dead; Odysseus had been put to death by reason of some shameful crime; and the Greeks at Troy were in desperate case. Dion omits to tell how Odysseus secured the arms—whether this was done first by treason (as was done by Neoptolemus in Sophocles) and then by persuading the hero that his bow was necessary to the success of the Greeks. But Odysseus' deception and his pleas were seemly (Dion says), suited to a hero, and convincing—it needed no great skill or plot to contend against a sick man and that a simple bowman.

The drama of Aeschylus was distinguished, according to Dion, by simplicity, absence of complicated plot, and dignity ; by its antique air and its rugged boldness of sentiment and diction, so that it was well suited to express the nature of tragedy and to body forth the ancient manners of the heroic age.

Aspasius on Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics 1150 b 6 states that in Aeschylus, as in Sophocles, Philoctetes endeavoured to conceal his agony but was finally forced to give it utterance.

Apollodorus, Library i. 9. 21, relates the story of Phineus as follows: "Thence the Argonauts put out to sea and landed at Salmydessus in Thraee, where dwelt the seer Phineus, who had lost the sight of his eyes. . . . The gods also sent Harpies against him. These were winged female creatures, and when a table was spread for Phineus, they flew down from the sky and snatched away most of the food, but the little they left smelled so foul that no one could come near it. And when the Argonauts wished to learn about their voyage, he said that he would advise them about it if they would free him from the Harpies. So the Argonauts placed beside him a table of catables, and the Harpies with a cry flew down and snatched the food. Seeing this, Zetes and Calais, the sons of Boreas, who were winged, drew their swords and chased them through the air. . . . Being freed from the Harpies, Phineus revealed their course to the Argonauts, and advised them concerning the Clashing Rocks on the sea."

ΦΟΡΚΙΔΕΣ

The Daughters of Phorcys was a part of the trilogy containing The Net-Druggers (Δικτυουλκοί) and Polydectes. In the first of these plays, fisher folk of Seriphus rescued Danaë and her infant son Perseus, who had been placed in a chest and cast into the sea by her father Acrisius. In the second, Polydectes, king of Seriphus, in order the better to effect his purpose of marrying Danaë, sent her son, now grown to manhood, to fetch the head of Medusa, the one of the three Gorgons who was mortal. In pursuit of this quest, Perseus encountered the three daughters of Phorcys, old women from their birth, who possessed between them a single eye and tooth, which they passed to each other in turn, and also the cap of Hades. These women, the Graecae, were sisters and guardians of the Gorgons, who dwelt in a cave by the ocean. On his return, Perseus changed Polydectes into stone by displaying Medusa's head, which he had cut off with an adamantine sickle that he had received from Hephaestus. In Poetics 18. 1456 a 2, Aristotle regards as a distinct species of tragedy such plays as The Phorcides, Prometheus, and those whose scene was laid in the lower world. The Phorcides may be a satyr-drama.

ΦΡΥΓΕΣ ἢ ΕΚΤΟΡΟΣ ΛΥΤΡΑ

The scene of The Phrygians or The Ransom of Hector was the tent of Achilles, as in the twenty-fourth book of the Iliad, which the poet here dramatized.

Hermes, the divine guide of Priam and his escort of Phrygians, preceded the entrance of the embassy to regain the body of Hector. Except at the beginning, and then only in few words, Achilles refused to speak to the god, but sat in silence, his head veiled in token of his grief for Patroclus. The gold brought as ransom was actually represented as weighed out in sight of the audience (Scholiast on Iliad X 351). To the peculiar dance-figures designed by the poet for the Chorus, allusion is probably made in a passage of a lost play of Aristophanes (Frag. 678): "I remember seeing the Phrygians, when they came in order to join with Priam in ransoming his dead son, how they often danced in many postures, now this way, now that."

And if unto the dead thou art fain to do good, or if thou wouldst work them ill—'tis all one, since they feel not or joy or grief. Nevertheless our righteous resentment is mightier than they, and Justice executeth the dead man's wrath.

Elsewhere Aeschylus declares that the dead possess consciousness and are wroth with those who have done them injury (Libation-Bearers 324, 41). Here, where Hermes has in mind the outrage done by Achilles to Hector's corpse, his utterance is intended to console Priam and rebuke Achilles with the thought that, though the dead are insensible and cannot avenge themselves, their cause is in the divine keeping. It is the gods alone who have power to do that which is commonly ascribed to the spirits of the dead.

² περ Ἐκτωρ M, παρ' Ἐκτορος GT.

Hail, offspring of Andraemon of Lyrnessus, whence Hector brought his dear wife.

The statement of the Scholiast that Andromache is addressed is the sole warrant for the interpretation of the action that supposes her to have accompanied Priam to the tent of Achilles. Since her father was Eëtion from Hypoplacian Thebe according to Homer, and since Chrysa and Lyrnessus were both in the plain of Thebe, the Scholiast seems to have confused Andromache with Briseïs, though he properly remarks on the strangeness of the name given to her father.

ΨΥΧΑΓΩΓΟΙ

The ancients, says Phrynichus (Bekker, Anecdota Graeca 73. 10), used the word ψυχαγωγός to denote one who by spells brought to life the spirits of the dead. The Spirit-Raisers was connected with the Penelope and The Bone-Gatherers, and included Teiresias' prophecy to Odysseus concerning that hero's death (cp. λ 100-137). In λ 134 the seer obscurely declares that "from out the sea thine own death shall come" (cp. Fragment 152).

ΩΡΕΙΘΥΙΑ

According to the legend probably followed by Aeschylus, Boreas, being enamoured of Oreithyia, daughter of Erechtheus, king of Athens, sought her in marriage from her father; repulsed by him, he laid hold of the girl by violence and carried her off as she was sporting by the Ilissus. She bore him two daughters, Chione and Cleopatra, the latter of whom became the wife of Phineus; and two sons, Zetes and Calais, who rescued Phineus from the Harpies. In the two extant fragments, which are cited as examples of pseudo-tragic diction, Boreas, enraged at the rejection of his suit, threatens to display his power in its full force.

FRAGMENTS OF UNCERTAIN PLAYS

This hoopoe, spectator of his own distress, hath Zeus bedecked in various hue and showed him forth a bird courageous in his full armour, tenanting the rocks. With the new-come spring he will ply the pinion of the white-feathered hawk—for he will display two forms from a single egg, his offspring's and his own—; but when the grain is threshed in early harvest-time, a parti-coloured wing will direct his course to this side or that. But ever quitting these haunts in loathing he will seek a new home amid the solitary woods and hills.

Now generally referred, with Welcker, to the Τηρέως of Sophocles (Frag. 581 Jebb-Pearson); Κρησσαι Hartung.

When Procne had served to Tereus the flesh of their son Itys in revenge for his violation of her sister Philomela, Tereus pursued them with an axe; and when the sisters were overtaken, the gods in pity turned Procne into a nightingale and Philomela into a swallow. Tereus became a hoopoe, or a hawk, according to a variant version of the legend. The poet seems to have assimilated the two legends by making the young hoopoe resemble a hawk.

Before speaking of the hoopoe's change in colour and appearance, Aristotle remarks that the cuckoo changes its colour. "On the zoological side," says D'Arcy Thompson, "the myth is based on the similarity of note in the hoopoe and cuckoo, and on the hawk-like appearance of the latter bird." In l. 1 the ἔποψ is called ἐπόπτῆς "spectator" by word-play; and similarly Tereus was "the watcher" (τηρέω).

Ἰηλιάδες Butler, Προμηθεὺς σατυρικός Hartung.

The daughters of Atlas and Pleione, transformed by Zeus into the constellation of the Πηλιάδες, were often regarded as doves (πελειάδες) by poetic fancy and popular mythology. The epithet "wingless" is corrective, because the maidens are not real birds.

And luxurious locks, like those of delicate maidens ; wherefore they approved the name Curetes for the folk.

The Κουρήτες in question were the earliest inhabitants of Pleuron in Actolia (cp. Iliad I 529 ; κούρητες in T 193 are "youths," κοῦροι). That the Greeks were hopelessly confused as to the meaning of the name is clear from the lengthy discussion in Strabo, Geography x. 3. 6-8, p. 466-467. Apart from other explanations, the word was derived now from κουρά, properly "clipping" of the hair; now from κοῦρος "boy" or κούρη "girl" (the Homeric forms of κόρος and κόρη), and with reference either to hair or to dress. The historian Phylarchus (third century B.C.) declares that Aeschylus here says that the Κουρήτες got their name from their luxury; and the Fragment certainly implies that, like girls, they wore their hair long (cp. Scholiast on I 529 παρὰ τὸ μὴ κείρεσθαι τὰς κόμας, Scholiast L ἢ ἐπεὶ κόμας κορᾶν εἶχον). But in Agathon's Thyestes certain suitors say that they wore their hair long (κομῶντες) until they had been rejected by their lady-love, when they cut off their locks, "the witnesses of their luxury," and by reason of their shorn hair (κούριμος θρίξ) gained the glory of being Κουρήτες. Archemachus of Euboea (see Strabo) had the notion that the Κουρήτες, before they removed to Aetolia, wore their hair long behind, but cut it short in front in order that their enemies might not seize them there. Strabo himself attaches no little probability to the opinion of those who sought to reconcile the different accounts of the name; for he says that the application of art to the hair consists in attending to its growth and κουρά, and that both are the peculiar care of κόραι and κόροι. To render κουρά by "hair-dressing," "coiffure," with the implication that the reference is to long hair, is opposed to the etymology (from κείρω "cut"). Relationship between κουρά and κούρη, κόρη, accepted by Curtius, is altogether improbable.

† οὐδὲ ἀπο. . . αὐτόν· οὐ γὰρ ἐγγύθεν
 . . . γέρων δὲ γραμματεὺς γενοῦ σαφής†

Plutarch, Table Talk i. 8. 1. p. 625 D.

. . . But when old show thyself a clear scribe (?)

Σαλαμίνιαι Hartung.

Cited by Plutarch to illustrate his remark that old men can read only when a book is held at a distance. The mangled passage eludes satisfactory emendation: σὺ δὲ (so Heath) | ἄπωθεν εἶδες αὐτόν· οὐ γὰρ ἐγγύθεν | ὁρᾶν· γέρων κτλ. Dindorf; and so E. A. J. Ahrens, but reading ὁρᾶς. σὺ δ' ἐξ ἀπόπτου (cp. Sophocles, Philoctetes 446) Headlam. The second line seems to mean "when old, write a large, clear hand," remembering that the aged read with difficulty.

σύ τοί μ' ἔφυσας,¹ σύ με² καταφθερεῖν³ δοκεῖς.

Plutarch, On Monarchy, Democracy, Oligarchy 4. 827 c, Life of Demetrius 35.

² σύ με 827 c, Dem. PLDA², σύ μοι Dem. A¹BC, σύ με καταίθειν μοι Dem. cod. 1679, vulg.

³ καταίθειν: καταφθέρειν Hartung, καταφθερεῖν Wecklein.

Thou indeed didst give me life, thou dost think to destroy me.

Πενθέως Anonymous reported by Stanley, Ξάντριαι Stanley, Νιόβη Hartung, a satyr-play Gomperz.

The reading σύ τοι με φυσᾶς, σύ με καταίθειν δοκεῖς, adopted by Perrin, means "Thou fannest indeed my flame, methinks thou dost quench me too."

Demetrius Poliorcetes quoted the verse in addressing Fortune.

θνήσκει τις, εἰ μὴ τέρμα συντρέχει βίου, οὔτ' ἐν στέγῃ τις ἤμενος παρ' ἐστία
φεύγει τι μᾶλλον τὸν πεπρωμένον μόνον.

Plutarch, Life and Poetry of Homer 157 (Wytttenbach v. 1196). In l. 2 Wecklein read μοῖρα for τέρμα.

A man dies not for all the many wounds that pierce his breast, unless it be that life's end keep pace with death, nor by sitting on his hearth at home doth he the more escape his appointed doom.

Ἐλευσίνιοι Hartung.

This is perhaps the nearest approach to pure fatalism in Greek tragedy. Cp. Demosthenes, On the Crown (18. 97) πέρασ μὲν γὰρ ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις ἐστὶ τοῦ βίου θάνατος, κὰν ἐν οἰκίσκῳ τις αὐτὸν καθείρξας τηρῆ, "for all men's lives have a fixed limit in death, even though a man shut himself in a chamber and keep watch."

Set God apart from mortal men, and deem not that he, like them, is fashioned out of flesh. Thou knowest him not; now he appeareth as fire, unapproachable in his onset, now as water, now as gloom; and he, even himself, is dimly seen in the likeness of wild beasts, of wind, of cloud, of lightning, thunder, and of rain. Ministers unto him are sea, and rocks, and every spring, and gathered floods; before him tremble mountains and earth and the vast abyss of the sea and the lofty pinnacles of the mountains, whensoever the flashing eye of their lord looketh on them. For all power hath he; lo, this is the glory of the Most High God.

DOUBTFUL OR SPURIOUS FRAGMENTS

Aeschylean authorship has generally been rejected since Grotius.

The Fragment was ascribed to Aeschylus in antiquity probably because of its lofty conception of God.

This tomb hideth the dust of Aeschylus, an Athenian, Euphorion's son, who died in wheat-bearing Gela; his glorious valour the precinct of Marathon may proclaim, and the long-haired Medes, who knew it well.

Athenaeus and Pausanias (i. 14. 5) state that the epigram was written by Aeschylus himself. The Life states that it was inscribed by the Geloans on the public tomb in which he was buried with splendid honours at the cost of their city.
